

WOMEN DRINK MORE THAN THE MEN IN GEORGIA

Atlanta, Ga., June 17.—That women are drinking more liquor, while men, as a rule, are drinking less than they did a few years ago, is one of the startling points brought out in the Georgia fight for prohibition, in the current issue of the Georgia Commonwealth, edited by Rev. G. W. Nicholberger.

Attention is called to the fact that the press of the country everywhere has much to say on this increase of drinking among women, which naturally breeds an inherited taste for drink in their children.

Notice is hereby given that the firm heretofore existing and trading under the name of Cott & Bergerson a partnership composed of W. A. Scott and H. W. Bergerson, has this day been mutually dissolved.

This 15th day of June, 1915.
W. A. SCOTT,
H. W. BERGERSON.

Witness:
JAS. L. HAYO,
6-17-15.

Our "Mystery" Offer—This and 50 other...
The Million Dollar Mystery...
Illustrated from scenes in the Photo Drama of the Same Name by the Thanhouser Film Company

The Million Dollar Mystery

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated from scenes in the Photo Drama of the Same Name by the Thanhouser Film Company

(Copyright, 1914, by Harold MacGrath)

She always loved in dreams, yet never...
The chair went true. A crash followed.
"Here!" he cried, holding out an ap...
"Where to?"
"Number 78..." and the rest of it...
Within twelve minutes from the time it left the garage, the car stopped opposite No. 78 Grove street, and Jones got out.

CHAPTER V.

The Problem of the Sealed Box.
"Gone!"
Susan eyed the revolver with growing terror. For what had she left the peace and quiet of Miss Parlow's; assassination, robbery, thievery and kidnaping? She wanted to shriek, but her throat was as dry as paper. Gt...
The shadow across the street stood undecided. At length he concluded to give Jones ten minutes in which to return. If he did not return within that time, the watcher would go up to the drug store and telephone for instructions.

But Jones did not come back.
"Where's Howard?" he demanded.
"Hello, Jones; what's up?"
"Howard, get that car out at once."
"Out she comes. Wait till I give her radiator a bucket of water. Gee!"
whispered Howard, whom Hargrave often used as his chauffeur, "get on his feet! First time I ever saw him awake. I wonder what's doing? You...
"What's that?"
"Howard, get that car out at once."
"Out she comes. Wait till I give her radiator a bucket of water. Gee!"
whispered Howard, whom Hargrave often used as his chauffeur, "get on his feet! First time I ever saw him awake. I wonder what's doing? You...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

BRYAN ENDS FIRST SECTION OF HIS NOTE

Washington, D. C., June 17.—Former Secretary Bryan in the first section of his statements on "The Causeless War," today prophesied that the greatest peace-making opportunity in all history was certain to come to the United States, and declared there would be a demand for an international conference with the return of peace to change the rules of international law which "seem to have been made for the nations at war" rather than for the nations at peace.

He clutched at his hat, put it on and ran to Susan.

"Here!" he cried, holding out an ap...
"Where to?"
"Number 78..." and the rest of it...
Within twelve minutes from the time it left the garage, the car stopped opposite No. 78 Grove street, and Jones got out.

But Jones did not come back.
"Where's Howard?" he demanded.
"Hello, Jones; what's up?"
"Howard, get that car out at once."
"Out she comes. Wait till I give her radiator a bucket of water. Gee!"
whispered Howard, whom Hargrave often used as his chauffeur, "get on his feet! First time I ever saw him awake. I wonder what's doing? You...
"What's that?"

CASTORIA For Infants and Children

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Dr. J. C. H. Fletcher

Atlanta, Ga., June 17.—The hearing before Governor Slaton on Leo M. Frank's plea for commutation of his death sentence was resumed here early today.

William M. Howard continued his argument in behalf of Frank, taking up the discussion of the testimony presented at the trial, at the point where he left off when adjournment was taken Monday.

mummy-faced headwaiters. . . . Al. Right, Jones!"
The chauffeur jumped into the car and Jones took the seat beside him.

"Where to?"
"Number 78..." and the rest of it...
Within twelve minutes from the time it left the garage, the car stopped opposite No. 78 Grove street, and Jones got out.

But Jones did not come back.
"Where's Howard?" he demanded.
"Hello, Jones; what's up?"
"Howard, get that car out at once."
"Out she comes. Wait till I give her radiator a bucket of water. Gee!"
whispered Howard, whom Hargrave often used as his chauffeur, "get on his feet! First time I ever saw him awake. I wonder what's doing? You...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

NATIONAL DEBT OF EUROPE GOES STEADILY HIGHER

Budapest, June 17.—The national debts of the belligerent powers have been increased $11,250,000,000 since the beginning of the war, according to figures compiled by Dr. Elemer Hantos, a Hungarian financial authority.

He clutched at his hat, put it on and ran to Susan.

"Here!" he cried, holding out an ap...
"Where to?"
"Number 78..." and the rest of it...
Within twelve minutes from the time it left the garage, the car stopped opposite No. 78 Grove street, and Jones got out.

But Jones did not come back.
"Where's Howard?" he demanded.
"Hello, Jones; what's up?"
"Howard, get that car out at once."
"Out she comes. Wait till I give her radiator a bucket of water. Gee!"
whispered Howard, whom Hargrave often used as his chauffeur, "get on his feet! First time I ever saw him awake. I wonder what's doing? You...
"What's that?"

FRANK'S HEARING WAS RESUMED YESTERDAY

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Dr. J. C. H. Fletcher

Atlanta, Ga., June 17.—The hearing before Governor Slaton on Leo M. Frank's plea for commutation of his death sentence was resumed here early today.

William M. Howard continued his argument in behalf of Frank, taking up the discussion of the testimony presented at the trial, at the point where he left off when adjournment was taken Monday.

mummy-faced headwaiters. . . . Al. Right, Jones!"
The chauffeur jumped into the car and Jones took the seat beside him.

"Where to?"
"Number 78..." and the rest of it...
Within twelve minutes from the time it left the garage, the car stopped opposite No. 78 Grove street, and Jones got out.

But Jones did not come back.
"Where's Howard?" he demanded.
"Hello, Jones; what's up?"
"Howard, get that car out at once."
"Out she comes. Wait till I give her radiator a bucket of water. Gee!"
whispered Howard, whom Hargrave often used as his chauffeur, "get on his feet! First time I ever saw him awake. I wonder what's doing? You...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

"Write the directions," commanded the second, who discarded the broken man style.

"I know of no hidden money."
"Then your father dies this night. Grange put a whistle to his lips. "Blow, write!"

"I refuse!"
"Once more. The moment I blow this whistle the man in the other room will understand that your father is to die. Be wise. Money is nothing—life is everything."

"I refuse!" Even as she had known this vile creature to be an impecator she knew that he had, that her father was still free.

Grange blew the whistle. Instantly the room became filled with masked men. But Florence was ready. She seized the lamp and huried it to the floor, quite indifferent whether it exploded or went out. Happily for her, it was extinguished. At the same moment she cast the lamp she caught hold of a chair, remembering the direction of the window. She was so...
"What's that?"

"Write down the directions yourself, father; you know them better than I." Since she saw no escape, she was determined to keep up the tragic farce no longer.

"I am not your father."
"So I see," she replied, still with the amazing calm.

Brains, in the other room, shook his head savagely. Father and daughter; the same steel in the nerves. Could they band her? Would they break her? He did not wish to injure her bodily, but a million was always a million, and there was revenge which was worth more to him than the money itself. He listened, motioning to the others to be silent.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Dr. J. C. H. Fletcher
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA

ALCOHOL 2 PER CENT.
Vegetable Preparation for Stimulating the Food and Digesting the Stomach and Bowels.

Promotes Digestion, Cleanness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC.

Perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac-Simile Signature of Dr. J. C. H. Fletcher

THE CASTORIA COMPANY, NEW YORK.

AT 6 months old 35 Doses—35 CENTS
Guaranteed under the Food Act

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

ATLANTIC HOTEL
MOREHEAD CITY, N. C.
Opens June 15, 1915, Opening Ball June 19th.
R. P. FOSTER, Proprietor.
A. J. COOK, Assistant Manager.

"Rabbit" Maranville Drinks
Coca-Cola
—the quick-step beverage for quick-step thinkers and players—for people who do things—for athletes who have the punch to deliver the goods in a pinch.

Demand the genuine by full name—nicknames encourage substitution.

THE COCA-COLA CO. ATLANTA, GA.

© 1915

Coca-Cola Bottling Works
F. E. MAYO, Prop.
WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA.

ADVERTISEMENTS IN THE DAILY NEWS GIVE RESULTS

NOTICE OF LAND SALE.
North Carolina. Beaufort County.
Under and by virtue of an order of the Superior Court of Beaufort County in a Special Proceeding entitled, Susan Boyd & Others vs. Major Snowden Waters, the undersigned Commissioner will, on Monday, the 13th day of July, 1915, at twelve o'clock noon, at the courthouse door in Beaufort County, sell for cash to the highest bidder the following described tract of land:
Situate, lying and being in Beaufort County, North Carolina, and in Long Acre Township, beginning at a corner known as the Walter Jones Corner, thence running with the Eas...

of George J. Waters, deceased, to the division line between Alfred Waters and his children, thence with said line running northwardly to a pine, thence east to the beginning, containing 20 acres, more or less.
Terms of sale, cash. Ten per cent deposit required.
This June 7th, 1915.
JUNIOUS D. GREMES, Commissioner.

6-9-15

CHICHESTER'S PILLS
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

WE ARE AGENTS
Iver Johnson, Reading Standard, Emblem, Hudson Dayton and Great Western Bicycles sold for cash or on time. We also have the most complete repair shop in the city all work guaranteed.
D. R. GUTLER
Phone 333