WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA, JUNE 22, 1915.

OUR OPPORTUNITIES.

A visitor in Washington yesterday made the remark: "It appears to me that with the advantages that this city has; its railroad and water facilities, its various and many industries and its surroundings of rich farm lands, there ought to be considerable more development and growth than there is at the present time."

Those words should make every resident of Washington think. What answer can be given? Why HASN'T Washington grown more in recent years?

There is no question but that nature has endowed us richly as far as location is concerned. There is not another city in North Carolina that has a more strategic site or better opportunities for development than we have right here. Why is it then that Raleigh, New Bern, Greensboro and other cities in the State have outstripped Washington in growth? Why are some of the smaller towns getting new industries and growing rapidly in size and population? They have no better location than Washington; in fact, the majority of them are not on any navigable stream nor have they as good a farming territory surrounding them as Washington. What's the answer?

After careful study, there appears to be but one solution. These cities see what they want and then go after it. Pick up the paper that are published in any of these towns. Read the headlines—"New Industry Secured!" "Another Factory to be Located Here!" Many others of the same kind may be seen at frequent intervals.

These factories or industries do not go to these other cities because they like the looks of the place, nor a bit of it. A vigorous campaign is planned by the city which desires the factory to be located there; citizens meet with officials of the industry which is looking for a location and liberal inducements are made in order to gain the desired end. It takes WORK and plenty of it to secure a new industry in a city.

What has Washington done in this line recently? Are we going to sit idly by the side lines and let the other cities of the State grab all of the good things, when many of them could be induced to come here if we went after them?

One man cannot do very much for the betterment of a city. It takes co-operation—united effort. The Chamber of Commerce is the organization that should take up these matters. Our present chamber is doing the best it can under the circumstances, but there are not enough men interested in its work or activities. The influence and backing of every citizen of the town is needed. With their aid and assistance Washington can hope for great things.

Give up the picture-show for one night; give up the lodge or anything else that may come up when the Chamber of Commerce meets and attend the meeting of that organization. We are losing big opportunities every month, simply because we don't go after them. Let's get busy. Let's GET THEM!

THE COMMUNITY Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Huntington's advice regarding the building of a Y. M. C. A. for Washington is endorsed by all of the business men of the city who have given the matter any thought. There is no question but that the city would find some difficulty in erecting a suitable building and still more difficulty in maintaining it. His suggestion regarding a "Community Y. M. C. A." appears to be the best way open for it at the present time. A capable young man, earnest in his efforts, could work wonders along the lines suggested by Mr. Huntington and his work would put the city to rest very little expense. The plan has been carried out successfully in other cities and it is believed will be equally successful in Washington.

LITTLE TIPS ABOUT People You Know.

Heard at the Chautauqua tent last night:
"Mamma!"
"Yes, dear."
"Mamma, what makes that man's head so smooth and shiny; did he forget his hair?"
(Exit mamma and the infant from the tent. Blushie on the part of the gentleman, tittering from those who heard the remark.)

This is rich, and what makes it all the richer is the fact that it's absolute facts. One of the young ladies—a bride of this year—recently asked her husband what he'd like for breakfast.
"Send the girl around to Adams' and see if he's got any egg plants," he replied.

"Egg plants!" she repeated in a rather dazed tone of voice. Then, with a dear little smile, she put her arms around his neck.
"You mean old thing, you love to 'ease, don't you? As if eggs grew on plants! I know better than that!"

Once in a while we get the joke turned back on us. A lady called us up over the phone this morning and asked us if we wouldn't be kind enough to print the outside of the paper blank tomorrow. Without thinking, we asked her why.
"It just fits my pantry shelves," he answered, "and with the print of it, the ink comes off on all my faces and things."

The following letter was received from a resident of Aurora this morning:
Dear editor:
I just wish to state that we appreciate your "Tipe" column very much out this way. My wife's mother is troubled with insomnia. All she has to do is to start reading that column and she goes right to sleep. My boy, Richard, read the column last night and then he went out in the yard and beat his sister with a club. My brother, who lives with us, happened to read it the other

WAR BABY SCARE
NOT JUSTIFIED
IN BRITAIN

London, June 22.—"No evidence available justifies the belief that the conditions of war have resulted in any exceptional increase in illegitimacy," is the conclusion reached by a committee, of which the archbishop of York is the chairman, which has been investigating the "war babies" question. The report says that special inquiries in sixty-two towns and districts brought no confirmation of the alarming rumors that have been in circulation concerning illegitimacy, and that there it had been considered unnecessary to organize special agencies to deal with the problem.
