JAMES I. MAYO Proprietor. CARL GOERCH Editor.

WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA, JULY 8, 1915.

The high-browed Daily Reflector of Greenville, Tuesday came out with the statement that war is an anthropological necessity.

THE PUBLIC PARK.

A suggestion was made in the news columns of yesterday's issue, that the city donate part of its dock property for the use of a public park.

At the present time the city is not making much use of this property. A few dilapidated shacks are standing, which, at nights are often occupied by vagrants and negroes.

The matter is worth serious consideration and it is to be hoped that it can be carried out.

Says the News and Observer: "It's good news from many parts of North Carolina that more brass bands are being organized.

Right you are! Washington could use one very nicely.

When it comes to arguing, we'll have to hand it to the Green ville Reflector. It starts at one point of the circumference and then, after much wigg-wagging, comes back to the starting point.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

Public sentiment is responsible for a number of things. It can do much good and again it can work great evils. In some instances public sentiment favors various laws and in others it treats them as jokes to be winked at when they are violated.

Until recently, the operator of a "blind tiger" in Washington could do practically as he pleased, as far as public sentiment was concerned. It was no disgrace for him to be brought into court.

A change has taken place, however, in the mind of the resident of Washington. The operator of the "blind tiger" no longer finds himself or his nefarious business admired by respectable people.

Often times there is an excuse for a man killing another—and oftentimes a man is justified in stealing, but there is absolutely no excuse for a man who engages in an illegal business that brings sorrow and disappointment to thousands of women and children.

No wonder that public sentiment has changed; that the "blind tiger" is forced to practically abolish his business and that self-respecting men and law-abiding citizens of Washington would just as soon have their families and friends see them going into a house of ill fame as entering the doors of an establishment, suspected of illegally selling liquor.

What was absolutely the most outrageous pun ever perpetrated upon innocent readers, was evolved in the versatile brain of the editor of the New Bern Journal, who, in mentioning the fact that the State editors climbed Mt. Mitchell at their recent convention
