

Hottest Day Yesterday

Up, up, up went the mercury in a terrific thermometer in this city yesterday and at 3 o'clock the century mark was reached. It was hot, it was worse than hot. It was scorching, and those Washingtonians who were not afforded the luxury of an electric fan, cat and sweated and cursed the weather, the flies and the mosquitoes.

Late in the afternoon heavy clouds overcast the sky and the temperature began to drop. Slowly the mercury cooled down until the 86 degree mark was reached and in that vicinity it hung around for the remainder of the afternoon.

Yesterday was probably the warmest day that Washington has had this year and that is not probably about the best that local citizens suffered more than on any previous day this season.

Craven County Banns Up the Church

Ludlow, Ill., Aug. 2.—Rev. J. H. Baker, pastor of the Christian church at Ludlow, resigned today because the members of his church boycotted him after he had excommunicated them from the pulpit for playing croquet on Sunday.

Several weeks ago Mr. Baker admonished his parishioners to cease what he called "desecrating the Sabbath," but they ignored his request. The following Sunday his sermon was more bitter.

The leaders of the church held a meeting and decided to remain away from the services until Mr. Baker ceased his attacks.

The following Sunday only a half dozen members were in the pews. When Mr. Baker saw he could not stop Sunday croquet playing and at the same time have a crowded church he quit.

Craven County Fight Typhoid

New Bern, N. C., Aug. 2.—A campaign for Craven county against typhoid fever has been started in the county quite a bit during the past few weeks, and it looks as if those who have been encouraging this movement are going to be successful in their efforts to have the campaign carried on in New Bern and the county. Dr. J. F. Rheim, county physician, brought the matter before the Board of County Commissioners at their July meeting and he urged that this body consider appropriating a sum not to exceed $500 for purpose, and at a recent meeting of the Board Dr. J. F. Patterson, port physician, suggested to the Board that they co-operate with the commissioners in putting this campaign on.

Prisoners Chew Up Collars

New York, Aug. 2.—For several weeks a number of inmates of the Tombs prison have been observed industriously chewing up their linen collars, and munching their shirts. One prisoner, it was said, had eaten up virtually all the collars he owned. In reply to questions the prisoners told the keepers that they had been tobacco or gum chewers for years, and that not having either they found particular satisfaction in chewing their linen. But the keepers were skeptical.

Today when fresh laundry arrived it was subjected to a test. A chemist found that the starch used in the linen sent to the prisoners by relatives contained a solution of a drug taken by habitual drug users.

Bathing Suits are Regulated

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 2.—One thing of the utmost importance for the future guidance of summer girls has been settled definitely and beyond any recall. It relates to the minimum length of the bathing skirt. Chief Surgeon Bossert, director of the bathing beach, today promulgated an order so explicit that neither summer maids, propriety police nor beach guards can fail to understand precisely what it means.

"Every bathing skirt worn upon the Atlantic beach must not be shorter than 3 inches above the knee of the wearer," says the chief. It applies with equal force, Beach Director Bossert said, to tall girls and short sisters. A tape measure has been added to the equipment of beach headquarters.
