JAMES I. MAYO Proprietor. CARL GOERCH Editor.

WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA, SEPT. 22, 1915.

Does anyone remember what was used to fill up the front pages of the newspapers before the war in Europe and the scrap down in Mexico were heard of?

We don't see much sense in this Asheville-Rocky Mount series. If Asheville wins, the Carolina league will have won the pennant and if Rocky Mount wins, a Carolina team will have won the pennant, so there you are.

"Those Mexican generals are long on everything else but common sense and citizenship," says the Greenville Reflector. Money too.

THE SALE OF WAR MATERIAL.

There are numerous business transactions that are not countenanced by moral or just people.

No one, who believes in the right and wrong of things, will sell a man opium or drugs, with which he may poison his body.

Thousands throughout the country are protesting against the sale of liquor.

Various sections of the country are prohibiting liquor, because they realize the evil that it does.

No honest merchant will sell a man a gun if the latter openly avows his intention of killing another man.

But thousands of men; scores of firms are today engaged in the manufacture and sale of ammunitions to foreign countries in order that their citizens may slaughter each other.

And not one word of protest is made by our citizens. Those few who do lift their voices are immediately set down as being pro-German in their sympathies.

But neutrality is only a minor factor in the affair. The true reason for our business connection with the foreign countries is to make all the money we can out of the misfortunes of the other nations.

The greed for money started the war and the greed for money is maintaining it. Thousands of men are slain, thousands of homes are saddened because of the American guns and the American bullets that are put in the hands of the warring nations.

Placed in this light, our position is far from being an enviable one. But what do the vast majority care? It is MONEY they are after. And for money they are willing to slay, to destroy and to cause ruin.

When your wife asks you tonight for your candid opinion of the new frock she bought at the fall opening this afternoon, it will be time to lie like a constable—or a senator.

And now we are informed that the rates of interest charged by North Carolina banks are lower than in any other State in the South. If the people would only take the trouble to investigate it, they would find that they are lower right here in Washington than in any other part of the State.

WHAT THE WOMEN COULD DO.

In that petition—over 18,000 feet long—which is signed by 500,000 women favoring woman suffrage, and which is to be presented at Washington—there are doubtless countless reasons set forth, showing why the ballot should be granted to the so-called "weaker sex."

It may not have occurred to many, but still the fact remains that the greatest agitation for woman suffrage is on the part of those women who have a lot of idle time on their hands and who do not know what to do with it.

It is the woman who has nothing in particular on her hands, who is the strongest advocate for woman suffrage, and in the majority of instances, it is not the principal of the thing that causes her endeavors as it is the fact that it gives her something to do.

There are many more important things that these women could turn their hands to than fighting for "votes." There are many other and more beneficial uses to which they could put their money.

If those women who are now spending so much time in endeavoring to secure equal suffrage, would only turn their efforts towards helping their unfortunate sisters, they would accomplish far more and greater results.

If you have not yet attended the revival at the Baptist church, you should by all means make an effort to do so. The sermons delivered by Dr. Loftin are masterpieces and are well worth hearing.

HON. J. BRYAN GRIMES

Recently Hon. J. Bryan Grimes has announced his candidacy for re-nomination for the office of Secretary of State. This announcement will be welcomed by many people throughout the State.

MODERN PARABLES

There was once upon a time a Young Man, a son of worthy parents, who was possessed with much moneys and who loved to make this fact known to his friends and neighbors.

And the Young Man took the girls out joy riding and to the theatres, and he gave entertainments for his friends. He did also order much beer and spirituous liquor from Norfolk and did verily have many a quiet little party, to which his friends were invited.

And it came to pass that the Young Man lost his position. Some of his investments turned out bad and soon he found himself entirely without funds.

Did the young ladies still smile upon him and greet him with pleasure? Were his other friends willing to lend him money when he requested them to do so?

Yes, indeed, Henrietta. You probably expected us to say "No," but as this is what is termed a "modern parable," we must forsooth spring a surprise once in a while.

And the Young Man, through the aid of his friends, managed to get back his money and was soon spending it as fast as he had done before.

REAL ENEMIES.

"If men must fight," says a New York pastor, "let them fight the common enemies of mankind—disease, poverty, human ignorance, human injustice and prejudice, child labor, white slavery and the Lynch law, and the thousand ills of body, mind and soul."

They are doing it even now, more than most of us think. The horror of war obscures the wholesome, generous, constructive movements that are going on simultaneously with it, and even mixed up with it.

It isn't all hate and cruelty and bitterness and falsehood. Noble motions are found side by side with deadly passions. In the very worst aspects of war will be found traces of pure and unselfish purpose.

Many of the belligerent nations and individuals are wrong—possibly they are all wrong. But to the credit of human nature it must be admitted that nearly all of them think they are right, and are willingly making heroic sacrifices for what they conceive to be their duty to the community, the nation, the race.

War is the greatest of all evils, and also the greater inspirer of self-abnegation. Millions of men today are giving their lives without a murmur, and with absolutely no thought of personal advantage. They are fighting and dying—or think they are—to make life nobler or more tolerable for their children and their countrymen.

If men could only be persuaded to fight like that against "the common enemies of mankind" mentioned by the pastor! Perhaps they will, some day. They go wrong now chiefly because their heads are wrong. When the world is properly educated, the nations will know what their real foes are.—Orange (Tex.) Leader.

ELECTION OF POSTMASTERS.

Colonel Bryan is advocating the election of postmasters by popular vote. He contends that as no office comes nearer the people they should have a chance to decide the question, and it would not matter to him whether the election "if left to a primary of the dominant party, or to a general primary." To have been entirely fair to the people, Colonel Bryan should have taken the broader view.

COMPREHENSIVE COAST DEFENSE.

Republicans have howled mightily about the inefficiency of the navy and the unpreparedness of the country for coast defense. One of our meanest habits is to remember things, and one of the things we remember is that when there was a Republican administration one of its naval exploits was to dismantle every navy yard on the South Atlantic and the Gulf.
