GOES BROKE ON HONEYMOON

Mishaps to Auto Put Bridal Pair in Financial Straits on Tour Through Iowa.

Muscatine, Ia.—To be owner of a large seven-passenger touring car, which you embarked upon your honeymoon, and yet be forced to apply to a welfare society for lodging for the night, would be embarrassing to most bridegrooms, but it didn't take any of the joy out of life for George Garrett of Elkhart, Ind., and his bride, who reached here en route to Seymour, Ia. A series of mishaps drained Garrett's purse, and upon his arrival here he was forced to "hock" his extra suit to buy gasoline and, with his wife, was boarded at a local hotel at the expense of a local charity body.

RUNS FARM WITHOUT HORSE

Wisconsin Man Demonstrates That This Is the Age of Power.

Marinette, Wis.—Eighty acres of land cleared and cultivated without a horse setting foot on the place is the record made by W. C. Wyckoff, a former Bloomington (Ill.) farmer, who located at Crivitz, in Marinette county, last year. His farm was entirely raw land in the spring of 1914.

Wyckoff says this is the age of power. He has an 11-ton tractor, and whether the task is clearing land, leveling, plowing, disking, harrowing or harvesting, the tractor furnishes the power. When he goes to town Wyckoff drives an auto.

CROCHET CRAZE SEIZES CITY

Needle Bites Keep Surgeons Busy Treating Injured Fingers at Princeton, Ind.

Princeton, Ind.—This city has for several weeks been in the throes of the crochet craze. Many women can hardly put down their crocheting long enough to get the meals and attend to the housework. Surgeons say that it is becoming serious.

Hardly a day passes but the surgeons have to treat from one to three women or girls who have jabbed the points of crochet needles into their fingers or hands. In many instances the broken pieces have to be cut out.

VESUVIUS IS IN ERUPTION

The whole country surrounding the volcano is mantled under a thick coating of ashes.

VOTED FOR SMALL THINGS

Great Men Not Always Helped in Memory on Account of Deeds of Consequence.

It is said that the duke of Wellington once "chaffed" Lord Brougham as a man who at one time bade fair to go down to future ages as a famous advocate of law reform and popular education, but who, after all, would be his renown in the name of the vehicle which had received his name. Brougham retorted by saying to the duke that his name, which promised to descend to after-times as the hero of a hundred battles and the liberator of Europe, was to survive as the appellation of a certain kind of boots. The story is a good one, whether true or mythical, and suggests to us some of the strange ways in which men become famous.

One person acquires celebrity by his giant intellect, as Webster or Calhoun; another, by his dwarf stature, as Count Borrowski, or Tom Thumb. There are great men who are known to fame hardly less by their physical or moral eccentricities than by their intellectual might. Such was the case with Lord Brougham, who was long associated in men's minds with the queer twist of his nose, on which punch hung so many conceits; and Lord Peterborough, who, walking from the market with a fowl under one arm and a cabbage under the other, quite threw into the shade Lord Peterborough, the hero of Almanza. The same was the case with the great duke of Marlborough, whose anglings with the Bath chairmen and acts of petty avarice were talked of long after the conqueror at Blenheim and Malplaquet was forgotten.
