WASHINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA, APRIL 15, 1916.

PHOOLISH PHEELINGS.

When you walk into the parlor, attired in a bath robe and a bright smile, and run into a lot of "company" that you didn't know was there.

Some people certainly have peculiar ideas about "luck." Here comes the New Day Sun-Journal with the following:

"Our idea of real hard luck, is to be stranded ten miles from nowhere with a 'busted' auto tire and your best girl on your hands, and with the hands of your watch slowly revolving toward the mid-night mark."

"Hard luck, do you say? Men, we'd give the last cent we have in the world to be in a fix like that."

WITHDRAWAL FROM MEXICO.

Carranza has requested the United States to withdraw its troops from Mexican soil. So far, this government has refused to pay any heed to Carranza's proposals and American soldiers are continuing their pursuit of the bandit.

If the United States continues to follow along this course, what will be the result?

Only one answer sounds plausible. Carranza will join forces with Villa and their united forces will be pitted against the U. S. troops. Of course, that would result only in lengthy warfare between America and Mexico.

On the other hand, if President Wilson and his cabinet decide that our troops should be recalled, what would follow then?

Carranza would find himself unable to cope with the outlaws as he was before the Americans crossed the border. There would then follow similar incidents to that which occurred at Columbus, N. M.

The question that faces the President is a difficult one to solve. He will undoubtedly be criticised, no matter which stand he takes. However, you are satisfied that with cool deliberation and thorough investigation, he will decide upon the right course of action to follow.

ANOTHER TEST OF SPIRIT.

Whether the girls of Washington will be afraid to go down into their pockets and dig up their share of the cost for improvements to Red Hill will, whether the spirit of listlessness, indifference and "moss-backism" has been forever crushed and forced to give way to true progressiveness and a desire for advancement, will be learned in the next few days when it becomes known with what response the appeal of the committee for funds for the road work are met.

If we are going to move ahead in the procession and keep abreast with other counties of the State, for Heaven's sake, let's do it. If we are too lazy or too miserly to help in a work of this nature, a work which will mean much to the business interests of Washington, then let's step trying to go ahead and give up all claims of being a progressive community.

We do not believe that the business men of Washington want to stop. We believe that they are as eager for the advancement of the city and county as they are for their own private business enterprises. If this is so, then let them respond liberally to the appeal of the committee.

"HUSBANDS ARE MADE."

"We are a woman's lines to me, pretty and ably and fluffy, after having filed papers for divorce from the man she had lived with for sixteen years. I asked her what sort of a man he was on their wedding day. He was the finest, squarest man in the world, she said. I assured her she had made a bungling job in the years; she had changed a good man into a bad one, instead of making him a wonder for the world. For a woman is the creator of her own matrimonial happiness."

This was the statement of Mrs. L. Brackett, Bishop of Chicago, who has been giving ample 6-cent luncheons at the Kenwood Swedish Mission parish house to prove that working girls can be fed on 33 cents a day.

"Women" are afraid to make proposals because they think all girls want flowers and limousines, when they really only want a shiny dishpan and a man to love. Husbands are made, not born, and every husband is made according to the demands of a woman's brain."

Mrs. Bishop has been married twenty-six years to a husband who has apparently been "made" to her satisfaction.

This isn't an argument for a girl to "marry a man to reform him," for the kind of man who cannot reform himself hasn't enough backbone to be good husband-making material. But it is true that in any human association, people are apt to become what is unexpected of them. The wife—or the husband either—who steadily expects strength of character, fineness, ability, in the life-partner, and who helps pave the way to the requirement and enriching of good qualities, is likely to find them there.
