MISS BUCKMAN MARRIED TO C. VARAN SWAN

Took Place This Afternoon at 4 O'Clock at First Methodist Church.

Beautiful in its simplicity was the wedding at the First Methodist church this afternoon when Miss Louise Buckman, one of Washington's attractive and popular young ladies was wedded to Mr. Constantine Varan Swan, a prominent business man of Stoneville, N. C., in the presence of a goodly number of well-wishers and friends.

The church auditorium, handsome within itself, was greatly enhanced in its attractiveness by the decorations consisting of evergreens, ferns, palms and flowers. The numerous waxen figures shedding their soft rays gave a beautiful background to the setting.

Long before the appointed hour, four o'clock, nearly every pew in the church was occupied by friends to witness the consummation of the vows of the popular couple.

Before the arrival of the bridal party an attractive musical program was rendered by Mrs. James Haskew, who presided at the organ, and Mr. Selby Jones, violinist. Just before the ceremony Mrs. D. M. Carter sang, "O Promise Me."

Promptly at four the massive organ under the deft touch of the organist began to play the familiar strains of Lohengrin's and the bridal party entered the church as follows:

The first to enter were the polite and attentive ushers, Messrs. Edmund Buckman, Charles Meekins, James F. Buckman, Jr., of this city and Seth Swan, of Bayboro, brother of the groom. The ushers wended their way down the center aisle in pairs to the chancel where they assumed their allotted places.

Following the ushers came the bridesmaids, Misses Nettie Frenness of Bayboro, and Elsie Buckman, sister of the bride. They were gowned in white lingerie with pink chiffon hats, carrying silver baskets filled with sweet peas. Arriving at the chancel the bridesmaids crossed and awaited the coming of the bride-elect.

The maid of honor, Miss Beadie Buckman, sister of the bride, entered the aisle alone. She was comely attired in white net and taffeta and wore a pink chiffon hat. In her arms she bore a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas.

The bride never appeared more attractive as she wended her way down the center aisle leaning on the arm of her father, Mr. James F. Buckman, who gave her away. She wore a beautiful going-away dress of dark blue, with hat to match, gray slippers and gloves. Her bouquet was a shower of white sweet peas.

Arriving at the altar they faced the pastor of the church, Rev. E. M. Stipes, who impressively spoke the words uniting them until death do them part. During the ceremony the sweet strains of Schubert's Serenade floated through the auditorium. The ring ceremony was used. To the familiar strains of Mendelssohn's and the merry chime of the wedding bells, the bridal party left the church.

Taking automobiles the party drove to the Norfolk Southern depot where amid a shower of rice and old shoes and the congratulations of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Swan left for Colorado and other Western States. They expect to be absent two months, after which they will return to Stoneville, N. C., their future home.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Buckman, of this city, and one of Washington's popular young ladies. She is of attractive personality and counts her friends as legion, a prize indeed well worth striving for.

The groom is a promising young business man of Stoneville, N. C., and has a bright and promising future.

The large number of wedding gifts received by the bride and groom test the high esteem in which they are held here and elsewhere. The Daily News joins their numerous friends in extending congratulations.

"Of course there are some," said the mayor, "who will not do anything until you go after them, but I am very much gratified at the spirit shown by the citizens so far towards cleaning up the town."

PROGRESSIVES OLIVE BRANCH IN EVIDENCE

Chief Moose Director, Charles Perkins, Has Invaded Chicago.

By H. L. RENNICK,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 1.—The invasion of Chicago by the Chief Moose Director, George W. Perkins, has added worry and mystery to the row of the candidates now enmeshed at the Congress Hotel where most of the G. O. P. presidential aspirants have pitched their tents. Perkins' arrival has characterized the opening of the Progressive preliminaries whose present plans are to run the Progressive convention parallel with the Republicans. The preliminary work will be done Wednesday and Thursday and the nomination for president and vice president Friday. It is believed however that one of two things will be done, viz: nominate Roosevelt immediately and then see what the Republicans will do or "stall along" until the Republicans do nominate and if he be acceptable to nominate the same man but if unacceptable then to name Roosevelt.

Later it was learned that Perkins had brought the olive branch here. After a conference with Hillis, the Republican national chairman, it was announced that the Progressives will agree to any candidate "who stands for Progressive principles."

P. H. Johnson Spoke to Voters Last Night At the Court House

A large number of enthusiastic Democrats heard with profit as well as pleasure the maiden political speech of Mr. P. H. Johnson, candidate before the county primary Saturday for the House of Representatives in the next General Assembly of North Carolina. While this was his first effort on the political platform, it proved to be a speech of a veteran and as a vote-getting speech was par excellence.

The speaker was forebly presented by Mr. Junius B. Getman. After thanking Mr. Getman for his introduction, Mr. Johnson at once began to discuss the issues of the day, his candidacy and what he stood for and had ever stood for.

"I have done everything, except go back on a friend or ask a man to vote the Republican ticket," said the speaker. "I love it because of its precepts: 'Of the people, for the people and by the people.'"

Mr. Johnson, in glowing terms, lauded the achievements of Woodrow Wilson and what he has done for the nation. "All our offices are now filled with competent democrats. Education and progress have been on every hand and we are building good roads which lead the coming generation to school houses where they are taught higher and better things."

Mr. Johnson at this juncture gave his hearers a history of the drainage law and what drainage has done in accomplishing in Pantego township. Said that already there were practically one hundred miles of canals, ranging from 25 to 40 feet wide in his township and that the farmers there were getting ready to plant thousands of acres of corn this year in a wilderness. The speaker stated that there were some defects in the law which he and the rest of the citizens in his section desired to be corrected.

This was one of the reasons, said he, why he desired to go to the legislature and that the democrats of Pantego township were calling upon the democrats and voters of Washington to help them in securing this legislation. Mr. Johnson called attention to the wonderful growth of his section of the county and what a thriving town Belhaven was with a population of 2500 people and what a valuable adjunct this town had been to Beaufort county.

Mr. Johnson stated that he had first thought of becoming a candidate for the state senate, but after learning that one of Washington's townsmen, the person of L. C. Warren would be a candidate and not wishing to antagonize the interest of this good town in its desire to be quietly stepped aside. Later on, however, at the instance of his many friends he became a candidate for the House of Representatives and was before the people asking for their support and confidence.

In referring to the "no fence" question, Mr. Johnson stated that realizing his right as an American citizen he cast his vote for the measure but when ninety per cent of his fellow citizens voted against the law he for one was willing to abide by it, that he always was one who believed that the majority should rule and in this instance there should be no exception so far as he was concerned.

In closing his remarks Mr. Johnson made an appeal to the citizens of Washington for their support. He called attention to the fact that his section had always supported Washington both politically and otherwise.

"We come to Washington as a little child asking for bread and find it cold, unresponsive and uninterested. Why is this condition of affairs," said he. "We now want your help and want it bad. For forty years our section of the county has not been represented in our legislative halls. Now we have claims upon you and ask you as loyal democratic, as loyal citizens, to meet us half way. Give us your support in this campaign."

Mr. Johnson at several points in his admirable address told several funny jokes illustrating his points of argument. As a joke teller he is a No. 1.

The address was in every way well calculated to do good. One fellow walked up to Mr. Johnson after his speech and said: "I came here against you but since I have heard you and how you stand I here and now promise you my support."

BONNERTON IS SCENE LOVELY WEDDING

Miss Lucie Gordon Ross Married to Thos. W. Heath of Kinston.

A wedding of state-wide interest took place in the Methodist Episcopal church, Bonnerton, N. C., this morning at 7:30 o'clock when Miss Lucie Gordon Ross of that place was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Woody Heath, of Kinston, N. C.

The church was tastefully decorated in bamboo, ferns and cut flowers. No more beautiful and impressive wedding ceremony has ever been consummated in Bonnerton and no couple ever entered the marriage relations with more well wishes for happiness and long life.

Just before the bridal party entered the church, Miss Irene Yelverton, of Fremont, N. C., sang charmingly "O Promise Me." Promptly at the appointed hour the organ under the skilled touch of Miss Margaret Ross began to play Lohengrin's and the bridal party entered the church as follows:

The first to enter were the sweet little flower girls, Misses Allen, Lucille and Madeline Tripp of Bonnerton, and Corrine Dixon of Kinston. The little ladies were gowned in white and carried bouquets of sweet peas.

These were followed by the ushers, Messrs. Gilbert Bonner and Clyde Ross. The maid of honor, Mrs. T. A. Ross, of Washington, entered alone. She was attired in a frock of grey georgette crepe, pink hat and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The maid of honor, Miss Ola Ross, sister of the bride, was comely gowned in georgette crepe over taffeta with black picture hat and carried a bouquet of white carnations.

The maid of honor was followed by the ring bearer, Miss Louise Styron, who carried the ring to be used in the ceremony on a silver waiter.

The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her father who gave her away. She was handsomely gowned in midnight blue taffeta coat suit with hat to match. She wore grey gloves and slippers and carried a mammoth shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and sweet peas.

The groom and his best man, Mr. R. E. Mewborn, of Kinston, met the bride at the altar rail.

The ceremony uniting these two young hearts was performed by the Rev. W. E. Trotman, pastor of the M. E. Church at Aurora. During the ceremony Schubert's Serenade was played.

To the familiar strains of Mendelssohn's the bridal party left the church and drove to the Washington and Vandemere station where they boarded the train for their future home in Kinston, carrying with them congratulations and best wishes from a host of friends.

The bride is one of Beaufort county's popular young ladies. She is a daughter of Mr. B. B. Ross, one of Bonnerton's highly esteemed citizens and farmer who at one time was a member of the County Board of Commissioners. She is a favorite wherever known.

The groom is a rising young business man of Kinston and at present is teller in the First National Bank of that town. The couple were the recipient of a large number of wedding gifts. The Daily News extends best wishes.

Among the out-of-town guests attending the wedding were: Misses Carlotta Mewborn, Carrie Lee Heasley, Corrine Dixon, of Kinston; Miss Irene Yelverton, of Fremont; Miss Rende Pittman, of Kinston; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Heath and T. W. Heath, of Kinston.
