ROTATION REDUCES SOIL LOSSES IN COTTON FIELDS

Soil losses are more severe on land planted continuously to cotton alone than on land where the cotton is grown in rotation with other crops such as corn, wheat, lespedeza, and clover. The picture above shows how experiments have demonstrated the value of good rotations in checking erosion, said E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College. Sometimes rotations will reduce erosion by as much as 18 tons or more per acre each year.

Four Poisoned, Negro Is Held

Lumberton, Feb. 1—Four persons are in Thompson Memorial Hospital here suffering from poisoning that was placed in flour from which their breakfast biscuits were made today, and Leroy Williams, negro farm hand, who admitted he placed the poison in the flour was held in the Robeson county jail.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox were still in a serious condition tonight, but their daughter, Irma Nell, eight, and Mildred Collins, seven, who was spending the night in their home, were considerably improved.

Williams told Rural Policeman A. C. Williamson and W. D. Northrop, who arrested him, that he placed the poison in the flour while alone at the Cox home on Sunday.

He said he did not know why he did it.

He would not eat any of the biscuits this morning, asking to be given some of yesterday's.

The Cox family ate a hearty breakfast.
