

"Big City" And "You're A Sweetheart," Coming

"Big City", a popular drama that shows the power of a great love to over ride the influence of racket-torn cities, comes Friday to the Carolina theatre. Co-starring in this picture are Louise Rainer and Spencer Tracy, two stars whose performance during the past year are more than equaled in this attraction.

Toe-tapping tunes, singable songs, and the glitter and whirl of Broadway after dark! A high calibre cast of the screen's top-notch entertainers! Specialties new to the screen!

That's only a portion of what's in store in New Universal's streamlined musical, "You're A Sweetheart" which comes to the Carolina Monday.

Headed by beautiful and popular Alice Faye, the cast includes that very popular George Murphy, and such well-known players as Ken Murray (of radio fame) and his stooge, the inimitable "Oswald"; Bill Gargan, Andy Devine, Charles Winniger, Donald Meek, David Oliver, and a brand new screen find, Frances Hunt, a sensation on the airways with Benny Goodman's Band and with the Vincent Lopez orchestra.

Waccamaw Senior 4-H Club Meets

The Senior 4-H Club of Waccamaw high school met Monday. All members were present with the exception of one. The meeting was called to order by vice president Mary Frances Dodson. "Come out and play with me" was used as the opening song, followed by the club collect. The home agent, Mrs. Marion S. Doshier, was in charge of the lesson. She gave the club members record and food preparation project books. She also explained the food project and made the assignments for the remaining part of the year. Following a discussion of 4-H scrap books, Mrs. Doshier requested each member to make and bring one to the next meeting. The club will meet again the 2nd Wednesday in March.

Farm Bill

Administration leaders, brushing aside republican protests about a "horrible gag rule", jammed the new crop control bill to the point of final passage in the house Tuesday. The minority men contended the house had not had time to read the 121-page bill providing for control of production through benefit payments and loans, and possible drastic limitations on marketing of crops. Their efforts to prolong debate on the measure, which was approved by a senate-house conference committee last Friday, failed, however.

has been carefully studied from the beginning, and the writer recently spent three or four hours talking to officials of the Department of Agriculture about how the law will be administered. But I speak here only for myself. This article deals only with the tobacco part of the bill. The writer hopes to deal with the cotton part in a subsequent article.

MARKETING QUOTAS

The compulsory features of the bill are based upon marketing quotas. It is required that when the Secretary of Agriculture finds that the total supply of any type of tobacco at the beginning of the marketing year exceeds the reserve supply in such a way as to indicate a low price for the current year, he shall fix a national marketing quota, indicating the total amount of tobacco that should be produced in the current year in order to maintain prices at the proper level. He is required to make by December 1st a proclamation fixing the national quota, which means the total amount to be produced, in the succeeding year. Of course as to 1938 it is provided that proclamation will be made shortly after the bill becomes law. Thereafter it will be on December 1st.

Within thirty days after the proclamation the secretary shall take a vote of the tobacco growers to determine whether they are in favor or opposed to fixing a quota for the current year. If more than one third of the tobacco growers vote against fixing a quota, it will not go into effect. Otherwise, it will.

proach the problem there are many men of many minds, and hasty legislation means poor legislation. The present bill is far from perfect, and is criticized by many good authorities. But it represents the earnest and consistent effort of congress to deal as best it can with a most difficult question.

This article is written not to give any final or official pronouncement upon the bill or its administration. Its only purpose is to give, as nearly as the writer can under present circumstances, answers to some of the important questions that are being asked about its practical effect. The bill

If adopted, the national quota shall be apportioned by the secretary among the tobacco growing states on the basis of the production of tobacco in each state during the five preceding years. Thereupon, through local committees of farmers the state quota shall be allotted among farms on which tobacco is produced on the basis of past marketing of tobacco, land, labor, and equipment for the production of tobacco, crop rotation practices, and the soil and other physical features affecting the production of tobacco. These committees are to be elected by the farmers themselves.

Just here an exception is made in favor of the small grower, producing thirty-two hundred pounds or less. Such grower will have an allotment equal to the average production for the farm during the preceding three years if this does not exceed thirty-two hundred pounds. Because of the necessity of greatly reducing acreage, as mentioned hereinafter, it will likely be necessary for growers producing thirty-two hundred pounds or less to take some cut on last year's production, or three year average, but the best information that the writer is able to get indicates that such cut will not exceed 10 per cent, and where there has been full compliance with the soil conservation program, the cut will likely not exceed 7 per cent.

As to new growers it is provided that not in excess of 5 per cent of the State's quota may be set aside for allotment to farms on which for the first time in five years tobacco is produced in the current year. A portion of this 5 per cent may also be used in making proper adjustments to growers producing thirty-two hundred pounds or less. The allotments to the new growers are to be based upon the same consideration as to land, crop rotation, soil and other physical factors, used in making allotments to old growers, without consideration of course of past production, but the allotment to a new grower shall not exceed 75 per cent of the allotment to an old grower similarly situated.

When a grower's allotment has been fixed he will be given a marketing card showing the amount of tobacco that he is entitled to sell without penalty. The penalty for selling in excess of that amount is fixed at 50 per cent, or 3c per pound, whichever is the higher.

The bill deals only with poundage, but it is understood that the Department will use the base acreage established under the 1937 program and will endeavor to harmonize the poundage and the acreage. If the price of tobacco is to be maintained at anything like its present level, it would seem that a considerable reduction in acreage throughout the entire belt will be necessary. The base acreage for flue-cured tobacco in 1937 was approximately one million one hundred and twenty thousand acres. It is also strikingly true that since the farm program was inaugurated, the production per acre has very greatly increased. Taking into consideration the supply of tobacco on hand, market conditions etc the Department is inclined to feel, according to my advice, that the production of flue-cured tobacco in 1938 should be around seven hundred million pounds if the price is to be maintained around the present level. To accomplish this it will be necessary to reduce the acreage from the figure stated above to around eight hundred fifty or eight hundred seventy-five million acres. It is strongly felt that the market will not take any larger crop than this at anything like the prices received in recent years. If the acreage is to be thus reduced, it will mean a cut running probably as high as 30 per cent in some cases and as low as 10 per cent in others. As indicated above, those who are furthest away from compliance with the 1937 program will naturally have to take a larger cut than those who have complied, and those who have fully complied with that program will be disturbed very little, according to my information.

Summing up the situation as it will affect various classes of growers, according to my best information, the oldgrowers stand in two classes, to wit: Those producing thirty-two hundred pounds or less, and those producing more than thirty-two hundred pounds. Those old growers producing less than thirty-two hundred pounds will receive an allotment equal to the average production of the farm for the past three years up to thirty-two hundred pounds, though they may have to take a small cut in acreage in the general reduction referred to above. Old growers producing in excess of thirty-two hundred pounds will be given marketing quotas based on the past production.

In conclusion, let me say that I know there are many who are opposed to any compulsory control. That is a question for the growers themselves to decide. But I am struck by figures before me which show that in 1932 there were in cultivation six hundred and seventeen thousand acres of tobacco, which produced an average of six hundred and five pounds per acre, brought 8 4-10 cent per pound and yielded a total of fifty-six million dollars. In 1937 there were nine hundred and eighty-two thousand acres which produced an average of eight hundred and eighty-three pounds per acre, sold for a little above cents per pound and yielded million dollars. Those are the figures and they mean much.
