Expert Answers Farm Questions

Calcium-Phosphorus Ratio; Spray For Apple Trees; Controlling Cotton Rust

QUESTION: What is meant by calcium-phosphorus ratio and what is this ratio for poultry?

ANSWER: This is the relative proportion of calcium and phosphorus in the poultry diet and the proper ratio is essential for bone development, egg shell, formation, and other body activities. If these minerals are not present in the proper proportions, conditions such as slipped tendons may take place. In growing chicks the percent of calcium and phosphorus in the feed should be 2.1 and 0.7 and for laying stock the percentage should be 1.6 of calcium and 1.0 of phosphorus.

Q: How do I make Bordeaux mixture for spraying my apple trees?

A: Three pounds of bluestone should be dissolved in a wooden container for about 12 hours. This solution is then added to about forty gallons of water and thoroughly mixed with four pounds of lime in the form of a Specialist Says Making paste.
