Recommends Recall Numerous Cases Of Beer License

A representative of the Brewers and North Carolina Beer Distributors committee appeared before the board of county commissioners in their meeting here Monday and recommended that the beer license issued by the county to J. B. Williamson be revoked. The place where the beer permit is in use is operated by his son, Odell Williamson, at Thomasboro.

Investigation of the place was made Friday by the committee representative, who visited the place of business and talked with citizens of the community. The commissioners will act Friday on his recommendation.

Cold Weather Is Help To Fisherman, Not Hindrance

The finding of a ton of freshly frozen sea trout near Southport when the tide receded one morning last week was something unusual. The explanation is easy. Trout freeze the easiest of all sea fish and freshwater will freeze much quicker than salt water. This school of trout had gone down the inland waterway for three miles or more to a point where there is a heavy freshwater content. The falling tide caught the wandering salts in shallow, frigid freshwater, and they just naturally froze to death. Commercial fishing for edible fish is good now and promises to be even better. Using hooks and lines Friday, Captain Barkley Tomlin and his crew of five on the Maude and Mable, caught 1600 pounds of big black bass. They were operating at Frying Pan, near the lightship, only remaining out there one day. They went again Monday with plans to remain until they loaded up.

Roe mullets at this season of the year are rather unusual. Fishing in Waldens Creek last week, Willie Cooker and his son, Maxie, got a thousand pounds of mullets, many of them fine roes at one set of their net. They were using one of the small 100-yard linen gill nets that are favorites with fishermen using rowboats and operating in inland waters.

John Potter has also been making good catches during the week. His largest night's work resulted in 1600 pounds of mullets being taken in two sets of his net. He was also working on Walden's Creek.

Weather Propoganda Is Saved By Technicality being, at least, Keziah may Although last month brought the longest sustained cold spell of the past several years, it was necessary to look back only six years through the files of the local weather bureau to find record of a colder day. That was in January, 1934, when the mercury dropped to 10-degrees above zero. Another fact brought to light by the records was that by virtue of a technicality the reputation of Southport's weather broadcaster is saved. Unless precipitation attains a measurement of .10-inches it is not ccunted, and at no time during the month did that much melted snow fall into the measuring recepticle. So far the time proclaim to the world at large that there has been no snow this year at Southport, and the weather reports will bear him But here comes some of the shine off that prospect: There was sleet on January 7 and again on January 19. Moreover, there were 20 days during the month when the thermometer fell below freezing, the coldest day being January 28 when the mercury dropped to 12-degrees. On January 27th the maximum reading was 30degrees, while the low reading for the day was 14-degrees. Rainfall for the month was
