FOUR GET FINES

Four men, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government of cotton marketing quota penalties due on the marketing of excess cotton, pleaded guilty and were fined in United States District Court at Brownsville, Texas, on June 7, according to word received by J. E. Dodson, secretary of the Brunswick County AAA Committee.

The defendants were Lloyd F. Elliott and Bryan W. Long, partners in the Electric Gin Company of San Benito, Texas; William C. Nycum, also of San Benito, a bookkeeper for the gin company; and W. R. Wardlow, a cotton producer.

Elliott and Long each received a fine of $10,000, of which $1,000 is to be paid in 70 days, with the remaining $9,000 of the fine to be suspended for 3 years, conditioned upon good behavior and payment of the $1,000 as specified.

Mycum was fined $1,000, payment of which was suspended for three years conditioned upon good behavior. Wardlow was fined $2,000, payment of which was suspended for 3 years conditioned upon good behavior.

The criminal action resulted from misuse of cotton marketing cards, the falsification of ginners' and buyers' reports, and failure to submit reports, as required by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in administering the cotton marketing quota program.

The government reserved the right to enter civil suit to recover cotton marketing penalties due.

POULTRY SUGGESTIONS

During the summer months farmers should lend every effort possible to providing comfort for the laying flock.

Check for Mites: The laying houses should be checked for mites, and immediately upon detection steps should be taken to eradicate them. (Use old burnt cylinder oil and kerosene on the roosts.)

Check for Lice: Also check the birds for lice and eradicate these by using sodium fluoride as a dust or dip or by painting the roosts with nicotine sulphate or some commercial preparation.

Cull: While handling the birds, or at night it would be well to cull out all large, overly fat and medium producing birds. They cannot stand the extreme heat and in most cases they are marginal producers and should be sold. Remember 85c saved is 85c made.

Increase Ventilation: Some farmers are finding it a good practice to open a space 12" to 18" wide on the back of the laying house up just under the plate for ventilation. Windows on the east and west sides may be opened for cross ventilation.

Provide plenty of water: Provide 4 or 5 gallons of water each day for each 100 birds and a sufficient number of fountains so that there is no crowding around the drinking fountains. Remember two-thirds of each egg is water and hens can't produce eggs if the drinking fountains are dry. Then too, you get 13c for water when selling eggs at 20c per dozen. Therefore, provide plenty of fresh, clean water at all times.

Feed Moist Mash: Give the old hens a moist mash at noon each day as it will help to keep them in production. Take three pounds of dry mash and moisten with milk or water and feed to each week.

Willkie Chosen GOP Candidate For Presidency

Nominated On The Sixth Ballot At The Republican National Convention In Philadelphia

SENATOR TAFT WAS SECOND IN RUNNING

On Fifth Ballot Taft Was Only Slightly Behind The N. Y. Utilities Magnate; Dewey Led In First Balloting

Wendell L. Willkie, former Democrat and N. Y. utilities executive was nominated by the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia as its presidential candidate Thursday night on the sixth ballot.

Unofficial counts in the convention hall gave Willkie 499 of the 501 necessary votes to nominate when Pennsylvania's delegation, which had stood solidly behind its Governor Harry James on all previous ballots, swung its entire 72 votes to the N. Y. Utilities magnate.

Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, and son of the late President William Howard Taft, on the fifth ballot was less than 100 votes behind Willkie, the unofficial count giving Senator Taft 377 votes and the N. Y. utilities man 429.

Willkie, in third place on the first, second and third ballots, climbed into the lead on the fourth.

On the fifth ballot, most of New York and all of Alf M. Landon's Kansas delegation went to Willkie, pushing him into the lead as the voting on that round continued.

The count on the fourth ballot was: Willkie 306, Taft 254, Dewey 250.

Willkie lacked less than 100 votes of enough to obtain nomination while the convention waited to hear from four states with 107 delegates. A delay was occasioned by an individual poll of the Iowa delegation. These four states had passed no the fifth ballot and were still to be counted: Iowa, Michigan, North Carolina and Wisconsin.

Unofficial results of the 5th ballot gave Willkie 425, Taft 370.

The powerful upsurge of Wendell Willkie's Presidential candidacy pushed him into the lead on the fourth ballot.

AMERICA is our home. It is our duty to be certain that our home is run smoothly—without prejudice or favor . . . that one end of the dinner table has as much food as the other. A possible explanation of this lies in the fact that during the past three years three large pulp and paper manufacturers have been buying up land in Brunswick county, and doubtless have incorporated land formerly classified as farm land into their holdings.

The advertising campaign of the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development can be credited with increasing substantially revenues of the State and income of its citizens.

On the credit side, the campaign has meant more tourists, more factories, more wages, more gasoline and sales tax revenues and more purchasing power for the State as a whole.

Tourists are now spending more than $100,000,000 annually in North Carolina, nearly three times as much as they spent prior to launching the Advertising Program in 1927.

Investment in new factories and additions to existing plants since the campaign started totals approximately $100,000,000. This has meant an increase of approximately $40,000,000 annually in pay rolls.

Gasoline and sales tax collections from tourists now total over $1,000,000 annually. From this source alone the State is receiving $10.00 for every $1.00 invested in the Advertising Program. For further information and tangible results on the North Carolina Advertising Campaign, write
