Mule, Maid And Mare Have Race Through Southport

"The Midnight Ride of Paul" Revere" was just a pleasant little gallop compared to the wild flight of a young Southport girl last week as she frantically fled on horseback from a pursuing "wild mule."

Miss Lois Jane Bussells was riding her saddle horse out the River Road by the old CCC camp site when she suddenly heard a crashing sound ap-proaching through the undergrowth. Into view came a little, shaggy grey mule which immediately made a bee line for the rider and her mount. Miss Bussells mistook the mule's amourous attachment for her horse for malice toward her, and headed for the barnyard. Now that, for a playful young mule on the loose, was better than a bin full of oats, and so a horse-mule race

Things were happening mighty fast as the procession laced its way through several of Southport's principal streets, and very soon after Miss Bussells, her horse and the mule reached her stable simultaneously several spectators had arrived to be in at the finish. Among them was Chief of Police Herbert Rogers, who caught and delivered the mule to his owner.

It was then, and only then that Miss Bussells was relieved to learn that a horse holds a particularly strong attraction for a mule-possibly a maternal affection-and that the young hybrid probably was trying to learn if the mare she was riding was an old friend of the family.
