

Plant Lespedeza On Small Grain

Is Time For Planting Lespedeza Either On Small Grain Or For Use With Spring Oats

It is the time for Brunswick County to sow lespedeza on small grain and also to sow for permanent pasture, according to County Agent J. E. Dodson.

In the case of oats and other small grain, lespedeza being sown on the soil and worked in with a cultivator or light plow. This light covering for lespedeza seed will serve two purposes. It will keep the birds from getting too much of the seed and at the same time it will prevent the seed from washing away should heavy rains come before germination sets in and the seed takes root.

In the case of winter grain already up the lespedeza should be sown on top of the field and the field lightly worked with a weeder or harrow enough to not injure the grain. Thirty pounds of lespedeza to the acre is regarded as a light amount to sow.

Sowing for permanent pasture the land should be well pre-

Gore Farm Growing Large Grain Crop

Claude Gore, Shallotte farmer and former member of the Board of Education, stated this week that he had 30-acres of really fine wheat and oats on which he is now planting lespedeza. He is also now planting ten-acres more in grain and will top it off with lespedeza.

His custom is to harvest his grain with a combine, leaving the straw to afford continued shelter from the sun while the lespedeza plants are small. Such a practice has been found to be a good one and the straw left in the field by the combine does not effect the quality of the lespedeza hay when it is harvested.

pared and fertilized before being sown in 25-pounds of lespedeza, 10-pounds of carpet grass and 3-pounds of white Dutch clover. This is for grazing, and in five years the carpet grass will have run the lespedeza and clover out. The pasture should then be top dressed with acid and potash, disced and reseeded to lespedeza and clover. No carpet grass will be needed for this second planting in the ground.
