Brunswick Boy Enters Contest

Wilbur Earl Earp Will Compete In State Livestock Judging Contest In Raleigh In August

Wilbur Earl Earp, president of the Future Farmers of American chapter at Bolivia high school, will compete in the state contest for livestock judging at the Future Farmers Convention in Raleigh in August.

This young Brunswick county boy was one of the winners in the district contest, and if successful in the state contest will win a trip to the National Livestock Show at Kansas City.

The boys in the Bolivia Chapter of the Future Farmers of America were members of the Brunswick-Columbus Federation and were winners in several contests held during the year. They won first place in competition for Parliamentary Procedure and Tool Judging and placed two men on the team to enter the district Livestock Judging contest. It was there that Earp qualified for the state contest.
