Hope To Be Able To Make This Trip An Annual Event For High School Seniors Of County

Despite poor weather conditions, Monday afternoon saw the beginning of what Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Thomas, of Clarendon Plantation, hope will be an annual event—a yearly pilgrimage of Brunswick county school teachers and senior students to see their beautiful home and flowers on the Cape Fear river.

It had been planned that each of the five consolidated schools should send their teachers and senior students to Clarendon Monday afternoon, following an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas. It is understood that large groups were ready to go each school until the morning rains dampened the plans. Clarendon like Orton, is on the River Road, a much used but unpaved throughfare.

Well aware that the road might be bad from the rain, the Southport students decided against the trip at the last moment. The same applied to most of the teachers. Principle A. C. Holoman, Miss Townsend, Miss Norment, Miss Annie Mae Woodside, superintendent of schools and W. B. Keziah decided, however that some of the other schools might show up, despite the weather and they had better go. They were glad that they did.

Clarendon with its wonderful location, beautiful flowers and shrubbery and fine old seventeenth-room brick colonial home, is well worth a visit from anybody at any time, especially when the

In addition to the camellias, azaleas and many other beautiful flowers, a special object of interest at this time is a considerable number of Japanese cherry trees, beginning to break in full bloom. They present a beautiful sight.

The Leland, Bolivia and Shalotte schools, discouraged by the weather, failed to show up. The Waccamaw school, which had chartered a big bus to carry about 60 teachers and students, found out at the last moment that the bus was not coming on account of the rain. Used to transportation setbacks, they got out as many of their own cars as
