The ghost of Theodesia Alston Hunt, which is said to be seen frequently on Bald Head island, is as well known, is a marvelously beautiful woman. At times when she makes her appearance on the island she is said to be dressed in a gown of shimmering emerald green. There are also three headless ghostly figures on the island. The other day Phil tried to get in touch with us over the phone about an expedition to the island. He failed to strike any pay dirt in Southport. Nobody knew where he was. About the time when he was trying to get somebody here to take us as we walked into this place in Wilmington.

Intrigued at the fishing of all sorts, commercial and sport. Mr. Evans is a real estate man in Huntsville and both he and Mr. Noble seemed to be interested in Southport and Brunswick county real estate. At any rate, they say they will be back and they went so far as to talk building.

The Sailfisher I, a crack cabin cruiser sport fishing boat, Captain Herman Reitz, Jr., arrived Saturday night from Ocean City, Mo., for a month or more of fishing before going on to its home base at Stuart, Fla. Captain Reitz told us that his parties got 43 white marlin from the Sailfisher I at Ocean City this summer. He said there is no doubt of the marlin also being off Southport and it will be the business of some of the boats to prove it this month.

Al G. Dickson, editor of the Wilmington News, was telling us this week that so far he had not been able to take his vacation this year. Al likes his fishing and he is pretty much of the same sort that we like ours without any frills and highpalutin tackle. Maybe sometime this month or next Al will do like Wilmington's postmaster, Wilbur Doshier: Come down to Southport for a week or ten days of fishing.

Some ten days or so ago "Uncle Joe" Reeves, venerable Southport negro, who does odd jobs about the town despite the fact that he is 92-years old, lost his watch. From all we can learn about it, the time piece was an open face model finished in nickel, with a leather pocket fob. The watch was probably worth very little to anyone except Uncle Joe. This writer will personally appreciate it if the finder will return the watch to "Uncle Joe", or come across with a donation towards buying him another watch. While some folks claim that they cannot be in Southport for five minutes before they meet up with us, one of our old friends ran into the opposite Friday. We were in Wilmington. Allan Corson, fishing editor of the Miami Herald and a fellow member of the Outdoor Writers Association of America, was headed back to Miami from eastern states. He left Route 17, came around by Southport and hunted all over town for us, or so he said in a note that he left. Mr. Corson has made two visits with us in prewar years. We regret that we did not get to see him this time.

Brunswick Woman Claimed By Death
