Rovin' Reporter

(Continued from page one) ton, principal at Bolivia, resigned this spring with the intention of farming. He is not leaving Brunswick, however. He has a place near Bolivia and is doing some farming this year. It is understood that thus far no successor to Mr. Bruton has been secured for the Bolivia school.

Brunswick, the big diamond back rattlesnake captured in this county two years ago and sent to the State Museum, is doing well and has always been in fine condition. Few diamond backs live in captivity, as they seem to prefer starving themselves to death. Norman McCulloch, of Raleigh, a member of the Bird Club, tells us that he saw Brunswick kill and eat a large rat last Wednesday.

Representative-elect Thomas E. Cooper of New Hanover county stated this week that he intends using every effort to interest the State Highway Commission in building another bridge across the Cape Fear river at its narrowest point below Carolina Beach. That would be somewhere in the location of the old Menhaden Products company plant, about seven miles above Southport.

Despite serious damage to tobacco on a number of farms in lower Shallotte and Waccamaw townships, the general outlook of the Brunswick county field crops seems especially good. Throughout nearly all of the county the rains that fell helped instead of hurt the tobacco crop. This applies equally well to other crops. A knock down of reports of conditions throughout the county would place everything as looking good.

Stories sometimes keep going round and round. Two years ago we released a story about Makotoka Lake and its fishing. The story was published generally and brought many inquiries. Two weeks ago the same story was picked up again and published in Outdoors. Since then we have been wearing our fingers out answering inquiries.

Pictures of Southport's Model T 1922 fire truck and a story about it will shortly appear in the Ford News, publication of the Ford Motor company. At least that is our supposition as we had to sign a release on the picture and story we wrote about the old truck last week.

Congratulations to Carl Goerch, North Carolina's most valuable known-your-own-state-man. Last week he got out the 15th anniversary edition of The State Magazine and it was a gem of purest ray among special editions. Incidentally, Carl published his own picture in this issue, for the first time. While he looks fine when viewed face to face, we looked on his printed mug and felt reconciled to the fact that he prints our picture and picks on us every chance he gets. We know now he was only having a build-up against the time when he had to print his own picture.

With school out, a lot of the younger Southport boys are turning to the waterfront for conflict with the mullet sharks and stingarees. This week Albert Dasher and Bertram Burris, Jr., reported to us the catching of a 100-pound stingaree. They said they had a very interesting time getting him ashore. Both boys are about 14-years old.

Things like this always make a newspaper man feel warm about the heart towards the writers: "Always enjoy reading your interesting weekly. In it I find a great deal that makes me feel highly of Brunswick county and Southport." The writer was Dr. B. W. Wells, dean of the department of botany, at State College in Raleigh.

"We had a big crowd at the beach Saturday night and an even larger one Sunday. All the folks over here are very much pleased at the outlook for this year and we are all working together to make this a year of real development at Long Beach." This was from Gene Tomlinson, who called around to see us Monday to express his appreciation of what he said was fine advertising and fine publicity that he has been receiving in this paper.

Shallotte Point and Holden Beach both report fine crowds this past week end and all through the week. The fish are now beginning to bite real good and both places are rapidly being discovered as wonderful spots where vacations may be spent and fishermen may fish. At both Holden Beach and Shallotte Point many new homes are under construction.

Meeting up with A. D. Whatley, who was the one-man booster for Howell's Point until a lot of other people found out what a delightful little place it was, we found him tickled pink over the fact that the state highway commission is constructing a road for the folks down there. To be sure, it is only a dirt road now, but it goes to a mighty fine inside fishing point and a lot of people are using it.

Bob Bryson, of Greensboro and Long Beach, has purchased himself an army duck and stationed it at Long Beach. Whenever the fancy seizes him he drives out in the ocean to go fishing wherever he pleases. When he gets back from such a trip he does not have to worry about getting his craft tied up securely. He just drives it up to the house and parks it like his neighbors park their cars.

A few years ago Herman Willetts left Brunswick county and went to Burlington where he has evidently shown himself to be a fine and dependable fellow. He is one of the foremen in the hosiery mill of Coy C. McCuiston, who owns a home at Caswell Beach and whose family is now spending the summer here. The other day Mr. McCuiston dropped around to this office and subscribed for the paper for Herman. Incidentally, as Mr. McCuiston goes and comes between his beach home and his hosiery mill in Burlington, he asked us what size socks we wore. We had not seen our good friend Dawson Jones for around two months. We had supposed he was sticking around his home at Woodburn and amusing himself by keeping up with his fishing, but even the best guessers sometimes guess wrong. Dawson showed up here at the office Monday and when we asked him how the fishing had been he ruefully explained that he had not been fishing, that he had been ill in his bed for most of the past two months. If he had been telling us something about fishing we certainly would not have believed him. As things are, we much regret to say that we are telling the truth. Visitors from over at Beach say that some of the catches fishing from boats on the tracoastal waterway are casting from the beach. Pretty soon there will be more of this. It is a foresight to build a fishing pier out from this beach or Beach. A good, reasonable drawing card for visitors in general and it would depend on itself.
