Farmers May Certify Seed

County Agent A. S. Knowles Explains Procedure For Being Able To Guarantee Purity Of Seed Strain

Brunswick farmers who plan to save certified small grain for their own planting or for sale as seed, should apply for certification at the office of the county agent before April 15th.

Growers may get the blanks for application at the agent's office. The certification guarantees against the mixing of varieties and that the seed is of known origin.

County Agent A. S. Knowles says that in order to certify the seed now being grown the wheat, oats and barley now being produced must be from seed certified in 1948. It may have been planted close to other varieties, but must have a definite turn-over or space between it and other varieties. A variety of rye that is growing within 250 yards of another variety cannot be certified.

Lumberton Man Speaks Of Soil

John P. Stedman, President Of Scottish Bank And Summer Resident Of Long Beach, Praises Soil Conservation Practices

LUMBERTON, April 7—John P. Stedman, president of the Scottish Bank, expressed his appreciation of the high school students who participated in the State-wide contest on conservation in an interview here this week.

"North Carolina is an agricultural state, with over one-third of its population directly dependent upon the land," Stedman said. "We feel that the boys and girls who took part in the speaking contests on land conservation have contributed much to the program of saving our soil."

Erosion is not such a serious problem in this area, Stedman added, but "conservation means more than control of erosion. It means better land use. Much of our land here can't be used at all for cultivation or even for pasture until it has been drained. So in many places we must start with drainage."

He said the full effect of the speaking contests could not be estimated. "Thousands of our school children learned something about conservation of soil and water," he concluded. "And they will spread the word in the 83 counties take part next year."

Thousand Chicks Placed In County

Ten Brunswick County 4-H Club Boys And Girls Join Poultry Project For This Year

Working with the Sears Roebuck Foundation, 1000 day old chicks were placed with boys of the 10 4-H clubs in Brunswick county last week by County Agent A. S. Knowles.

Although this practice is pretty general, this is the first year that the undertaking has been sponsored in Brunswick county. Mr. Knowles states that the 4-H clubs are showing a lot of interest in this and various other projects.

The boys and girls receiving ceiving and reading every issue of your esteemed periodical.

Today I am taking time off to write to you and congratulate you upon the quality of the weekly editorials, the news from the high schools of Brunswick County and the column of The Roving Reporter. I can appreciate the high school news because I reported high school doings to my home town paper in Wisconsin during my boyhood days. The humor the Roving Reporter incorporates into his items brings forth many a chuckle. It's rich. Thanks for all the features and best wishes for the continued success of your periodical.

Sincerely,
Herbert B. Johnson

Dear Cheerleaders,

It may seem a bit irregular to be getting this letter, but the truth is I wanted to tell you personally how much I enjoy reading your columns.

I have been reading the State Port Pilot regularly each week and I'll frankly admit (though Mr. Harper may not appreciate this) that "High Times" is the most interesting and by far my favorite section of the paper.

I would, however, like to make one suggestion. From all reports Richard Brendle is a pretty hot ball player so you could do him no harm by writing a detail account of his exploits on the hardwood. A lot of people read The Pilot and if the right person sees it Richard may be on his way to glory.

I join with the citizens of Southport in expressing my fondest congratulations for the excellent job you are doing of giving us up-to-the-minute news of Southport high school.

Yours very truly
F. Mollycheck
