CROP ALL HARVESTED

EQUIPMENT BACK

VISIT SON

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Swain and family and Mr. and Mrs. John J. Swain and son made a week end trip to Ft. Campbell, Ky., to see Pfc. Joe E. Swain, who is stationed there.

COMEBACK MADE

making a come-back. Many of them caught the local view of things. They also began to plan to rebuild and many have already acted on these plans. No one could get started until February as it was first necessary to rebuild the sand dunes. There was not a single front row house left on the beach by the storm.

The John P. Stedman home was the only one on that front row being reconstructed when the first of February came. Now, five and a half months later, there are 60, and the number on the second row is greater. Even now in the blazing heat of summer, there is no surface indications that the builders are slowing up or inclined to take a vacation. The rebuilding goes right on and the fall and winter months are expected to see building continue. The first anniversary of the storm on October 15 will show Long Beach more than half way back to where it was before the storm. In the opinion of many, next June will find the place as big as it was before the storm.

Long Beach is now an incorporated town, something that it could not boast of less than a year ago. Along with being incorporated it has an adequate water system coming along and new areas are being prepared for development.

Yaupon Beach, also now an incorporated town, has made wonderful strides in growth. A hundred new building lots have been sold in the past three months; a modern steel ocean fishing pier has been built and with it a large skating rink and amusement center building, a concrete boardwalk, concession building and miniature golf course. A goodly number of the folks who bought residential lots have built homes, started to build or plan to build right away.

There are grounds for believing that both Yaupon Beach and Long Beach will surprise the public with the general development that takes place there within the next 12 months.
