

MEET THE FOLKS At Sunny Point

(By I.T. COL. Wm. F. MURPHY)

MONTGOMERY WILLIAMSON

CLEAVE A. CARDWELL

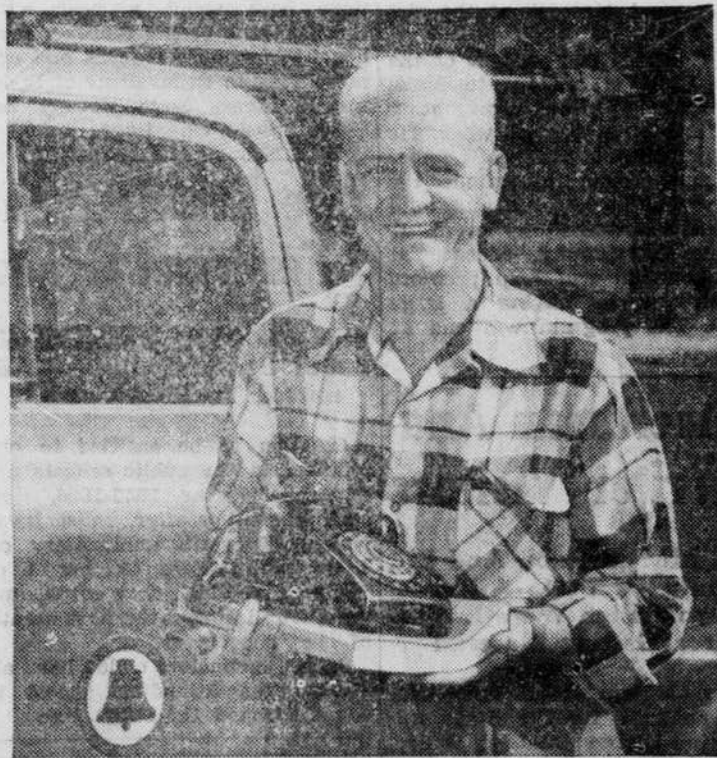

We have constantly stressed safety and fire fighting at SPAT and right now we are in the process of introducing crew members of our fire fighting teams and fire fighting equipment, which all leads up to Montgomery Williamson, the Third Officer on our Fire Boat, the F-765.

Williamson was born in Orrum and is now living in Southport. He entered on duty with the terminal on 1 November, 1955, at which time he assumed his duties as third officer aboard the Fire Boat. His experience in this field is extensive. He has been connected in some manner with boats for the past 15 years, having traveled along the coast and inland waterways from Virginia down to Florida, and is, in the opinion of SPAT officials, eminently well qualified for the position he now holds in their organization.

He is married to the former Ruth Nance from Robeson county and they are the parents of three daughters. Mrs. Bonnie Faye Giddings, Phoenix, Arizona; Mrs. Edna B. Meshaw, Riegelwood; and Muriel Daphne, who resides with her parents here in Southport.

Assignment here in Southport is much to Mr. Williamson's liking, for one of his greatest hobbies is fishing, and being able to mix fishing with a love for baseball has made life pleasant for the Williamsons here in our county seat.

PAUL TINSLEY... with another armload of good living for somebody. Paul's been with the Company for 16 years. He's active in church work. Hobbies are fishing and hunting.

Meet the Man who brings an armload of good living . . .

Paul Tinsley, telephone installer for Southern Bell, brings a lot of good living with his phones. He brings peace of mind. Security. Quick, easy touch with folks around town or across the land, at low cost. He brings the beauty of telephones in color . . . the convenience of light-up dials, spring cords, "hands-free" Speakerphones and other new things for the "well-telephoned home"—with the right equipment in the right places for your needs. Paul and fellow-installers have put in over 7 1/2 million phones in 10 years, as part of one of the South's exciting growth stories. He and 66,000 other Southern Bell folks work together to give you the complete, modern telephone service you want.

Hodges Supports Vitality For CD

RALEIGH — North Carolina Civil Defense officials are suffering no delusions about the fact that a great many communities in the state are not prepared to cope with disaster, either enemy caused or from the forces of nature, state director, Edward F. Griffin said in disclosing that renewed, intensive effort to change the situation is underway. Under a cover letter from Governor Hodges, council chairman, copies of a new "Guide to Local Civil Defense Planning and Development", recently published by the North Carolina Council of Civil Defense have been sent to governing officials of every county, city and town, and to local Civil Defense directors. "Communities share an equal responsibility with the federal and state governments in survival planning and planning for natural disaster. It is impossible for the latter to go into your community with adequate facilities and personnel to establish your Civil Defense organization," Governor Hodges said.

"I strongly urge all communities which are not cooperating at present to establish such organizations without further delay. It should be done for the best security of your community, our state and our nation."

constructed to provide a combination kitchen and bedroom, with hidden beds. In this way families and parties who wish to do their own cooking have sleeping, cooking and eating facilities at hand, just as if they were renting a complete home.

Yaupon Beach itself has very few homes for rent. All of the 35 or more families who live there are year-round residents. The motel fills, or partially fills the need of tourists and others who come in for the day, week or a month. They need more such accommodations, Barbee says.

In furtherance of the belief in and plans for motels, Yaupon Beach Corporation has reserved several choice locations especially for parties who desire to build this type facility.

In its own motel, soon to be enlarged, they are putting central heat in all rooms with expectations of the place being used the year round.

THRILLING ACCOUNT

When I got back to the tackle shop, George was putting the finishing touches on a sleek-looking outboard runabout he had just cleaned up.

"Load your stuff in that gray boat over there," he said, pointing to a trim little skiff which was pulled halfway out of the water.

We were loaded and on our way in a jiffy.

We moved out into the river channel and George pointed the bow toward Fort Caswell.

We made one brief stop at a spot where George claims he catches trout in the winter.

"It's a little early for trout, but I always like to give them a try," he said, with a grin.

Soon we were heading for Cedar Creek and tarpon.

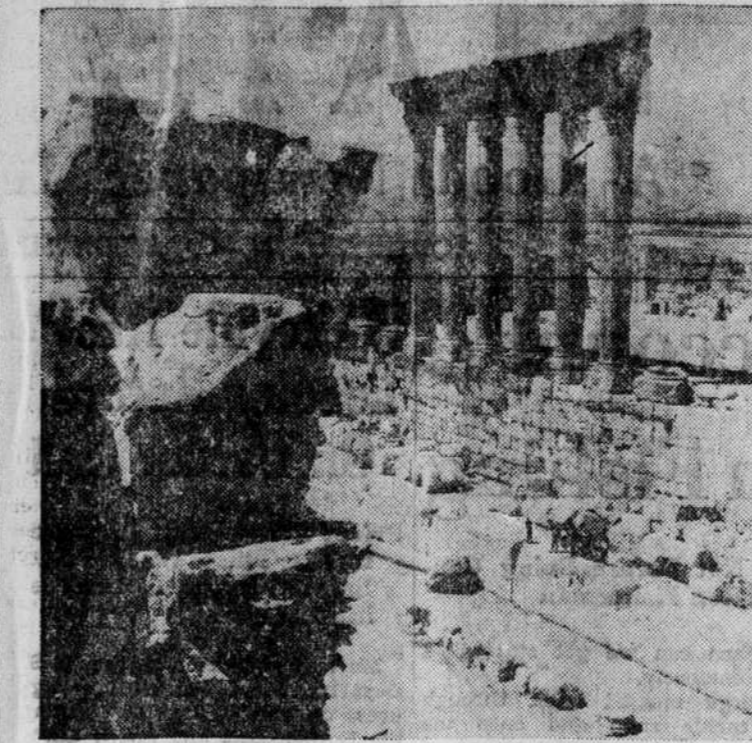

As we neared the area, I noticed George scanning the water with his experienced eyes.

Something flashed from the water directly in front of us and George's finger pointed. "That's tarpon," he shouted.

Before we had anchored the boat, we saw two more tarpon.

I was so excited, I could hardly tie the leader of my fly.

I finally got my bait in the water, and settled back, anxiously awaiting some action.

The time passed, and the tide began falling more rapidly.

I became restless, and I could see my chances fading with the falling tide.

"I don't think they're going to bite."

George smiled. "How do you know, you haven't given them a good chance yet," he assured me.

I heard the faint sound of an airplane engine. It grew louder and then I saw a familiar Piper Cub coming across Baldhead—it was Hall Watters' plane.

Hall circled low and called to us on his loud speaker. I had talked to him about the tarpon several days before.

"You got that boat loaded with tarpon," Hall chided.

On the second pass, Hall said, "George! George! Can you hear me?" George waved his hand.

"George, I have a twenty pound drum in the plane. Do you want it?" George waved his hand again.

"Sure I want it," George said, laughing.

Hall pulled out of the steep bank and headed in the direction of Southport.

George and I were talking about what nice fellows Hall and his brother Robert are, when suddenly a giant tarpon rolled between our boat and my float.

"You'd better get ready," George cautioned.

I had the rod firmly in my hands when the cork went out of sight. The reel screamed as yard after yard of line spun off.

George and I both stood up. "Let him have plenty of line," George advised.

The reel was on free spool and the line continued to roll off.

"Now!" George called, "Take him now!"

I flipped the reel in gear, clamped my thumb on the spool and horsed back on the rod with all my might. It failed to turn the tarpon and failed also to slow him down, because the line continued coming off the reel just as it had when I had it on free spool.

I expected the big fish to take to the air, but it defied the conventional and made a lung toward the boat instead.

I reeled as fast as I could.

"Keep a tight line," George said.

"I can't George, he's coming too fast."

When it was within 20 yards of the boat, the tarpon cut to our left, and I felt the hook pull from its mouth. I stood there, shaking with nervous excitement, and a little sick to my stomach for losing the prize.

George consoled me with talk of hooking another one, but I knew the fishing was over for the day.

"Let's go in," I said.

George cranked up and we headed for the row of prominently white buildings along the western shore.

As the pitch of excitement began to subside, my disappointment faded and I began to realize that it had been fun—great fun.

I had a good fish tale to tell, and already I could feel a slow burn inside, that would stay with me until I could visit Southport again and give the tarpon another try.
