NC High Court Changes Made

RALEIGH—Governor Hodges has announced the resignation of Chief Justice Maurice Victor Barnhill of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, effective 1 p. m., August 21. The governor, who said the resignation was submitted for reasons of ill health, accepted the resignation with deep regret and issued the attached tribute.

The governor also announced that Associate Justice John Wallace Winborne of Marion was being elevated to the office of chief justice. To fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court, the governor has named as associate justice the Honorable William Blount Rodman, Jr., attorney general of North Carolina. Judge Winborne and Rodman will assume their new duties at the hour set for Judge Barnhill's retirement.

"I am very pleased to have Judge Winborne as our new chief justice and I am confident that he will serve with great distinction and will follow in the footsteps of Judge Barnhill and other great chief justices of North Carolina," the governor said. "As senior associate justice on the court, he will bring to his new position great legal experience, wisdom and talent."

"In the appointment of Rodman, North Carolina will continue to have the superb services of an honest, able and dedicated public servant. I was pleased to appoint him as attorney general on July 1, 1955, and he has made an outstanding record and has rendered invaluable service to the State and to the people of North Carolina. His counsel and sound judgment have meant a great deal to me."

It was pointed out that the effective date for the resignation and new appointments was made so that the new Chief Justice would have sufficient time to get acquainted with his new duties.

SPEAKING MEETINGS

Board of Elections, mailed absentee ballot forms to the 100 county boards of elections in the State. Regular ballots will be mailed out within the next few days.

The public school ballot will allow properly registered persons to cast ballots "For" or "Against" a constitution amendment which, if adopted, would allow local option units to close their schools if conditions become intolerable, and allow the use of State and local funds for education expense grants. Of course, no school could be closed without a vote of the people.

This proposed amendment, submitted to the people by an overwhelming vote of the legislature, is what Governor Hodges calls "stand-by" legislation. The governor is very hopeful that it never will be needed. Instead, he has urged voluntary segregation in the public schools, and use of the 1955 pupil assignment statute to its fullest extent.

An affirmative vote by the people on September 8 does not mean that either local option or education expense grants will go into immediate use. They would merely be "safety-valves" to be used in case the other courses did not work in a manner acceptable to the people.

Public approval must twice be had before any school could be closed: (1) the amendment must pass in September; and (2) the people of any given local option unit would vote later, if conditions become intolerable, on closing their school.

These merely are facilities for carrying out what the Pearsall Advisory Committee and the governor believe to be the consensus of the great majority of North Carolinians; and that is that no child should be forced to attend public school with members of another race if the parents of that child object.

Maxwell, meanwhile, issued details of the election procedure. Registered people, no matter whether they are Democratic or Republicans, can vote. Voting will be held at regularly established precincts.

Registration books were opened for new registrants at the polling places on Saturday, August 18; and Saturday, August 25. Persons desiring to register at any other times can do so at the home of the registrar. September 1 will be challenge day. Absentee ballots may be obtained from the chairman of the county board of elections. These are available to people who will be away from their polling place on election day, and to the ill. Servicemen who are assigned elsewhere, their wives and dependents can get absentee ballots from the Office of the Secretary of State in Raleigh. Service personnel can get application forms from their commanding officers if they wish.
