Two statewide bills of some importance were "killed" following the learning during the learning during the committee hearings during the last week. One of these bills would have placed the entire State on daylight saving time and the other bill sought to abolish absentee voting in general elections in North Carolina, with the exception that military personnel would have been permitted to vote by absentee ballot. Except for military personnel, absented voting in the Democratic primary is not permitted at present.

A bill which should be of considerable interest to our county was introduced simultaneously in the Senate by Senator Frink and in the House by your representative on Wednesday of this past week. It was March 22, 1939, and historic Prices Creek lighthouse was to be sold by the government. The structure had stood since Civil War times, and had guided Confederate blockade runners through Corncake Inlet. The hulk of a barge sunk off Battery Island, directly opposite Southport, had been ruled by the Corps of Engineers as a non-menace to navigation and would remain where it was, barely peeping out of the water. Brunswick county would be well represented in the upcoming C & D booklet "Variety Vacationland"; a group of artists from the Wilmington colony had been canvassing Bald Head Island; and the Rev. Paul Fields of Rose Hill was to preach a revival series at Trinity woodland scene, in which the rapid growth of longleaf pine was the central figure. Southport grammar graders were to appear on WMFD on the following Saturday; all county school children had been invited to enter the upcoming Southport Woman's Club flower show; and a Southport dry cleaner had adopted the slogan "We Clean Everything Except Fish."
