Spot Fishing Is Attracting Crowds

Spot fishermen feel that their favorite fall sport is just before reaching its peak along the coast of Brunswick county, although thus far there has been considerable delay in the arrival of these tasty little fish.

Those who have used gill nets on the beach have netted quite a few, but for the most part they have been small. Muddy water and heavy seas have messed up pier fishing for the past few days.

During the past weekend there were literally scores of small boats fishing at both Lockwoods Folly and Shallotte inlets, and pretty good results were reported.
