

Social Security Helps Disabled

Recent Changes In Regulations Will Extend Payments To Persons Formerly Ineligible

There's good news for disabled persons under 50, according to Doris H. Moss, Field Representative of the Wilmington, N. C., Social Security Office.

Before last year's amendments to the social security law, a disabled worker under 50 could have his social security record "frozen," but he and his family could not be paid monthly benefits until he reached age 50.

This is now changed. Any person under age 65, who meets the definition of "disability" in the social security law, and who has worked long enough in employment covered by social security may be eligible for benefits, regardless of age.

"If you are disabled worker under age 65," Mrs. Moss urges, "consult your social security office right away to see if you are eligible for monthly benefits."

Persons who are so severely disabled that they cannot work and who have no immediate hopes of recovery, and who have worked under social security for at least 5 out of the 10 years just before becoming disabled should apply immediately.

Disability insurance benefits for disabled workers under age 50 and their families were first payable for the month of November, 1960. Disabled people receiving social security benefits can now receive payments for up to twelve months after they return to work.

The law works this way. If a person returns to work, even though his condition has not improved, he must report his work to the Social Security Administration. His checks will not be stopped. After he has worked nine months the Social Security Administration will review the situation to see whether the beneficiary has regained his ability to work. If he is found able to engage in substantial work, and therefore is no longer disabled within the meaning of the law, he will still be paid his benefits for three more months, or a total of twelve months in all. Then the social security checks will be stopped. This means a disability beneficiary can receive benefits up to twelve months after he returns to work.

The twelve month trial work period gives financial support to the disabled beneficiary when he returns to work. He knows he can count on his social security benefits while he finds out if he can work.

4-H Club News

By JAMES E. GOFF
Assistant County Agricultural Agent

As part of the National Agricultural Extension system, 4-H Club work reaches the fifty states in the United States, as well as Puerto Rico. It is the youth program of land-grant colleges and state universities, the cooperative extension service, and the United States Department of Agriculture. It is financed by federal, state, and county governments under congressional and state legislative acts establishing and appropriating funds for agricultural extension work. County extension workers are the county representatives of the Extension Service who supervise the 4-H program.

More than 40 countries in the world use the 4-H Club idea as a basis for their efforts to help their people themselves deal with everyday living problems.

In this nation, there are more than two million boys and girls, 10 to 21 years old, who belong to 4-H Clubs. They live principally in rural and suburban areas and devote much time and effort to a wide variety of projects.

Members raise livestock and poultry, grow gardens and field crops, operate power and mechanical equipment, conserve the soil, sew, cook, preserve food, make things for their homes, and work for community betterment. Character development and good citizenship are long-range goals.

Projects are carried on under guidance of community adults known as 4-H leaders. By helping develop skills and growth in character and citizenship, local leaders serve their communities through work with youth who live there.

The community adult leader will soon play a more important role in our 4-H clubs in Brunswick county.

Third Generation— At The Picture Show

By BILL FURPLESS

Lee Remick and Montgomery Clift are co-starred in "Wild River."

EDITOR'S NOTE: This week we start a new feature, "At The Picture Show," and the young man who will write it each week during the summer is unusually well qualified to serve as a commentator on movies. He is Bill Furpless, son of Amuzu Theatre Manager B. L. Furpless and grandson of the late Price Furpless, who for many years operated the local theatre.

Paul Anka, the young singing sensation, is continuing to gain fame. One of his new pictures is "Look In Any Window." With Paul is Ruth Roman. He has a record of the film's theme song of the same title. This is the story of a teenager whose parents pay very little attention to him.

Raymond Burr, who through his portrayal of the always-the-victor Perry Mason on TV's favorite detective show, has become a national institution turned in his crime-fighting cloak for the role of a besieged southern landholder in Twentieth Century-Fox's production of "Desire In The Dust".

Burt Lancaster new picture is "The Young Savages". It is just released, so I don't know too much about it, except that he is a district attorney. I have just read that it is more exciting than "Elmer Gantry".

Short Subjects: Jerry Lewis has a new picture "Ladies Man"—WBCT carried the Academy awards in which Burt Lancaster won best actor as "Elmer Gantry"—Gigi Perreau and Paul Anka are the young lovers in "Look In Any Window"—"I'll see you next week, but meanwhile remember that "movies are better than ever".

Marsden Sullivan Buried On Friday

Marsden Amond Sullivan, 83, died at his Winnabow residence, Tuesday night after an extended illness.

Both sides of the law were consulted for technical advice by Producer Bryan Foy before he proceeded with filming of "Blueprint For Robbery" based on the famous big city armored car service holdup. This show combines agonizing suspense with thrilling action. Foy consulted with ex-convicts who had been actual stick-up-men, with a big city district attorney, and with Warden Smith of the U. S. Federal Prison at Terminal Island, California.

Instead of plunging right into the hold-up action in the film, Foy traced the way a gang would organize to pull all the biggest contract ($8,000,000) in mob history. He shows the hoodlums casing the joint after hours, dodging the guards, studying the electric alarm system, making dry runs, all of which builds up suspense.
