 argument and testimony.
 The case of Mrs. Josie Fullwood vs. William C. Kincaide was settled, with the plaintiff receiving $3,150 for personal injury suffered when struck by a vehicle driven by the defendant. In the case of Marguerite Frink vs. Woodrow Spencer the plaintiff was awarded the sum of $525 for property damages inflicted in an auto collision.

The case of Barbara Long vs. Lonnie Hammond went to the jury, which found that the plaintiff had not been hurt through the negligence of the defendant. This also involved a collision of motor vehicles.

 erage man and reminded his hearers that God had first claim upon the time the energy and the ability of every man. "It follows, then, that God also has first call upon our means as well," he said. He recommended that in tithing that the first one-tenth be set aside for the Lord, not the tenth part of the family income.

Keyes cited numerous examples of persons whom he had known who had found that tithing had become a financial blessing, not a hindrance. But he refused to place major emphasis upon that point, citing the pleasure and satisfaction that comes to the man or woman who is willing to work hand-in-hand with God.

Keyes spoke in Charlotte Sunday morning before flying to Wilmington. Monday he spoke in Asheville. And on two occasions last week he was speaker at meetings in New York City, once in Toronto, Canada.

He was introduced by the Rev. Drayton Cooper, pastor of Southport Presbyterian Church.

the deadly blaze has been given, it is believed by some persons that perhaps a faulty kerosene heater in the trailer might have been the cause. Bennett said McCullum's charred body was located in the portion of the 40-foot trailer that once housed a back bedroom. The entire trailer was reduced to a twisted mass of metal, gutted by the flames.

Coroner Bennett said there was no indication of foul play and that no inquest will be held.

Final rites for Mr. McCullum were held Sunday at 4 p. m. at New Hope Baptist Church near Whiteville by the Revs. J. P. Jones and Maurice Gilliam, with burial in the church cemetery.

"It is further resolved that the Board of Aldermen of the City of Southport hereby expresses its gratitude for this outstanding service rendered by the Southport Junior Chamber of Commerce, and commends this organization for this unusually civic-minded project."

GOVERNOR SANFORD

 then Ernest E. Parker, Jr., introduced a number of distinguished guests. Among these was Raymond Stone, executive secretary of the Better Schools Committee, who explained that this was the very first in a series of State-wide meetings designed to bring a progress report on the Quality Education program to the citizens of North Carolina.

Next on the program was John G. Long, superintendent of Brunswick County Schools, who explained a questionnaire on Ten Standards for School Improvement as it applies on a local level. Each person filled out one of these forms and they were collected for further study.

Governor Sanford was introduced by Representative S. Bunn Frink, who did a quick, clean job without usurping any time from the main address.

Many persons, who had thought this would be a program to whoop it up for Tuesday's bond election, were surprised when the Governor failed to even mention it in his speech, but stuck to the theme of education.

Following the meeting, Governor Sanford visited Shallotte High School, where he was given a conducted tour by Principal Winfred Johnson, Supt. Long and others. Afterward he stopped by the Henry C. Stone Cafeteria for a cup of coffee before continuing on his trip to Whiteville, where he spoke at 1 o'clock.

Speaker Fuller described the 31 co-operatives in the state as watchdogs over the electric rate structure in comparison with private enterprise.

He said the REA has been a major factor in bringing the price of electricity within reach of the masses of people. He cited the fact that in 1935 electricity was 18 cents per kilowatt hours in Georgia and now it is about 2.5 cents per kwh.

He said that the rural people spent their money for electricity when no one else would provide the needed power. Now, since the areas served by the REA's have become attractive, there are those who would force the REA out of business.

He said the charge that REA was socialistic was untrue, that it is not a government organization, no more than a home financed through government money.

Fuller paid tribute to President Roosevelt for initiating the REA and in so doing "he filled a human need." He also said Governor Scott filled a human need when he worked successfully to provide farm to market roads throughout the state.

Even in 1894 when it was built it cost $25,000,000. One staircase cost $1,000,000. It is called a monument to the art of stonemasonry. The Capitol is open from 10:00 to 4:00 daily and guards are on hand to direct visitors. Other sights in Albany can be seen from the observation tower of the State Office Building.
