MR. AND MRS. C. C. CARR

Long Beach Couple Honored On Fiftieth Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Carr were honored on November 25 at an open house at their home at Long Beach, the occasion marking the 50th anniversary of their marriage. Host and hostesses for the event were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Carr and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Carr, the latter from Beaufort. Approximately 50 guests called during the afternoon to pay their respects.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hood have returned home after a visit to Newport News, Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mauney and children of Raleigh spent the past weekend with Mrs. Mauney's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Moore, returning home on Tuesday.

High Times

Hi! Here we are again ready to give you the latest news from Southport High School.

This past week was a busy one for the Dolphins. We had two basketball double-headers on Friday and Saturday night. Both teams came out on top! We have a game here this Friday night with Nakina.

Mrs. Davis had a little girl Sunday night and Mr. Davis is certainly walking on air these past two days.

The school newspaper came out for the second time this year on Wednesday, November 22. It was better than the first one. The news staff works very hard for it to be a number one school newspaper and they do a good job of it. The paper hasn't been named as yet. There are now three names to choose from. They are: Dolphineer, The Choosy Newsy and the Doffy.

The glee club is working hard this month. They will have their first public concert on December 17.

Shallotte School Lunchroom Menu

Following is the menu for the Shallotte High School cafeteria for the coming week:

Thursday, Dec. 7—Meat loaf, candied yams, cut green beans, fruit jello, biscuits, butter and milk.
Friday, Dec. 8—Ham with dried

WORRY

By DR. ROGER W. PRICE

Worry is a predominant emotion today. People worry about death, loneliness, poverty, war, inflation, disease, etc. Disease is one worry that you can help dissipate. It has been said that when once the cause of disease is known you are half way to the cure.

Patients suffering from complete collapse from worry and nerves find Modern Chiropractic examination and treatment is their return battle to health. Following the patient's first treatment he finds a change taking place in his body. The tension in his previous system began to relax, his peace of mind is restored and he begins to gain strength daily. The Modern Chiropractor finds that many patients are worried and nervous mainly because they have been unable to find anyone who can locate the cause of their sickness.

See your Modern Chiropractor — the doctor who has specialized in the study of the spine, nerves and muscles — for relief of worry and nerves.

Praises Work Of Youthful Artists

By EUGENE FALLON

Carefully-tabulated statistics prove that the United States is becoming culture-conscious with a vengeance. More Americans write verse; more dabble in brush and oils; more mold clays and marbles than ever before in our history. About the only art in which we seem to be slipping, is music-composition. Swing and bop and jazz have made us nervous, depressed and haggard. Johnny Notalent swings his hips, grimaces and groans, while music flees wildly. The mermaids are replaced with the Mermans. Lorelei is now gravel-voiced Brenda Lee, and the siren sings on the Rhine, to no avail.

To prove that Southport is forging ahead in a quest for culture, the Southport Art Association, in company of Southport High School, recently instituted an art contest open to students of this area only, and of high school age. The winning exhibits to come out of that city-wide contest hang in the admirable Southport Public Library in such illustrious company as William Shakespeare, Thackeray, Thoreau, Whitman and Kenneth Greene. Follows a brief commentary on that work:

A special award was given John Martin Lewis and Jon Arthur Newton for a two-section mural worthy of a young Michelangelo. In this canvas, which bears no title, the entire Southport waterfront comes alive, and one can actually see the fishing craft rise on the harbor sweets, while the gulls hover hungrily overhead. The U. S. Coast Guard boat more alive and personal than the red marker boys, with its cutter-engines idling, purrs as paternally as any fond parent ever a beloved child.

In the color graphics division, Sandy Donnel, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Donnell, took second-prize with moose (two) in a forest. Sandy's ferns are fine, but her trees (or maybe her moose) are a bit out of perspective, with the great animals somewhat dwarfing the (great) trees.

The Christmas story centers the third-prize offering, called "Bethlehem", drawn by Landis Brown. The minarets and turreted mosques, the palm trees and the subdued hues of the faithful, here revealed cold and sterile under that strong starburst which heralded the Birth of the Child.

Ruth Hohrein's "Wonderful Place" exerts a powerful pull with its pure simplicities. Her ocean is always an ocean; the lone boat in the harbor struggles valiantly, the single tree in the drawing not only shades a real and substantial scene, but reflects an unconscious European influence in its planes. The tree might well be the very first Cedar of Lebanon. Ruth is 16, and lives in Southport with a grandmother. Perhaps the most magnetic offering in black and white graphics is Clare Margaret Gore's first-prize winning exhibit called "Holy Madonna". The young artist (Clare is a fourth-grade elementary student here) shows an amazing depth in this creation. The motif is a sombre one with dark gray predominating. It is as if the picture shouts: "This is the Madonna after the Sorrows, and when her Son had been murdered." The robe of true melancholia, the Mother stands on a rock pile, looking away. The figure is translucent, and gives the impression of shuddering or trembling. This critic prophesizes a great artistic career for young Miss Gore.

Patti Key, 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Frances Key, flaunts an extremely fine touch—almost of delicacy—in her first-prize-winning watercolor. The work is untitled, and might be called "Sylvan Fields" or "Splendid Summer". Patti's grasses are lush under the trees; daffodils intrude along the inner borders of the painting. A partial rail fence looms in the foreground, and the sky is properly azure. An off-color white for background adds a touch of mystery, almost of sadness. And it is as if, lurking behind the summer, one senses the little, white death of Winter.
