Art Festival Is Scheduled To Be Held This Week

Entries Expected In Various Categories From Many Sections Of State; Large Crowds Predicted

The Second Annual Arts Festival will open in Southport Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and indications are that paintings and other art exhibits from many sections of North Carolina will be shown. There also are indications that large crowds of upstate visitors will attend the festival, which will extend through Sunday afternoon.

Paintings will be received in the City Hall from 10 o'clock until five on Thursday, and local artists are urged to get their work in early.

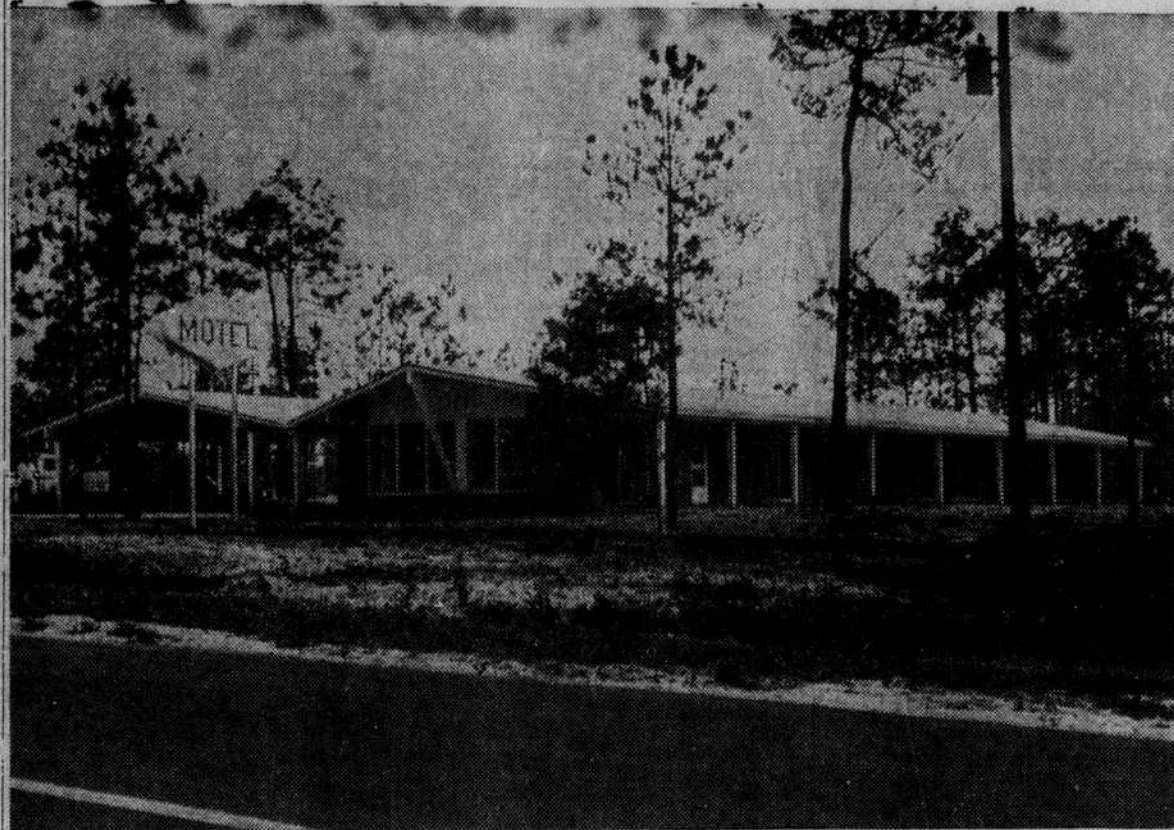

Mrs. Robert Willing, secretary of the Southport Art Association, stated that inquiries from over one hundred and fifty artists throughout the state have been received so far, with more coming in each day.

Bob Berman, Wilmington jeweler, will act as emcee during the entire festival. He is well known throughout the area as an emcee and after dinner speaker. He will be assisted by Misses Martha Mallison, Ann Cammack and Betsy Duffie, who are in charge of the entertainment. Art Newton, local artist, will perform during the event, singing folk songs and playing his own accompaniment.

William Williams, poet laureate for the second festival, has made arrangements for a poetry reading to take place on Sunday afternoon, with the Editor of Pen In Hand, the Wilmington College poetry publication, and other out of town poets participating.

Boiling Spring Lakes Motel

NEWEST—This is the beautiful new motel at Boiling Spring Lakes, which will be open for guests for the first time this weekend. Dr. Stephenson is the proprietor.

Boiling Spring Lakes Planning Big Celebration

Fourth Of July Marks Second Anniversary Of First Sales; Big Water Show Is Planned For Lake

Boiling Spring Lakes will be two years old officially next week, and authorities at Brunswick County's big inland real estate development are making plans for a gala celebration.

An all-day open house of the area is slated for July 4th, plus a water show that will afford visitors a glimpse of one of the leading aquatic groups in the South. Hal Reeves, sales manager for Boiling Springs, announces that the Charleston Water Ski Club from Charleston, S. C., will be present again this year.

"This is one of the leading amateur water skiing groups in the South," Reeves said, "and they were so popular when they were here before that we have invited them to return." Featured among the acts that the South Carolina team will stage will be stunts using giant kites, piggy-back skiing and high jumps.

The water show will be staged at the Terry Sanford Dam at Boiling Springs twice on July 4th. The first show will begin promptly at 1 p. m. followed in two hours by another show.

The 17-member ski group performs throughout the South, operating out of its headquarters in South Carolina's historic port city. "The group is constantly working on new ideas," Reeves added, "and I'm sure they will have equally as good show as they did last fall."

In addition to the big water carnival, an open house of the entire Boiling Springs area will be held. Art Huntley, promotional director, stated that the general public is invited to inspect thoroughly the whole real estate development.

Back From Europe

Bellamy Family Home

The first thing the James D. Bellamys family's wanted when they got home from their 10-day trip to Nice, France, was a drink of clear, cool water.

They were hot and tired, but still thrilled, from their dream-trip to the annual convention of Lions International, a journey that had its beginning at last year's International Convention at Atlantic City when 9-year-old daughter Pam drew the Lucky ticket which gave her two tickets to this session.

Father James could think of no clear-cut division in his close-knit family group, and then there it was decided that all four would make the trip abroad.

They left from Wilmington on June 15, flew to New York and from there to London. The return trip also was made by air, this time by way of Barcelona, Spain, Lisbon, Portugal, Santa Maria, in the Azores, and thence to New York.

New York by way of Detroit, Mich., that is. They reported that when their plane reached New York there was such a storm in progress that they were routed to Detroit. Before they could land, however, conditions cleared and the plane was ordered to return to New York to discharge its passengers.

This was not the last unscheduled difficulty with airplanes, however. They had reservations (Continued On Page 4)

The young lady above is Pam Bellamy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Bellamy of Shallotte, who returned yesterday from the Lions International Convention at Nice, France. Two of the members of the family of four had a free trip, thanks to the lucky draw made by Pam last year at Atlantic City. She won a free trip to this year's convention. Holding her in his arms and beaming proudly is outgoing International President Per Stahl of Sweden.

Boiling Springs Motel Finished

Latest Addition To Facilities At Nearby Development Will Be In Use This Weekend

The $50,000 Boiling Springs Motel will be open for business beginning Tuesday, according to its owner-manager Dr. Stephenson.

The retired chiropractor said he is looking forward to a sell-out crowd for the motel's first weekend of activity.

Brunswick's newest hostelry is a six-unit affair, built by the Lester Brothers, Incorporated, of Martinsville, Va. This corporation is famous for its Lesco Homes. The motel is furnished throughout in modern furniture supplied by the International Hotel Supply Company of Boston, Mass., and Atlanta, Ga.

"Everyone of our rooms has a beautiful view of the lake," Stephenson commented. The six units are complete with TV sets, air conditioning and full bath. (Continued On Page 4)

Supply Man Is Killed By Son

James Palmer Clemmons Dies From Shotgun Blast Fired By Son Reportedly In Defense Of Mother

James Palmer Clemmons, 40-year-old Supply resident, was shot and instantly killed Sunday about noon and his son, 14-year-old James Weston Clemmons, told investigating officers that he shot his father to keep him from killing his mother.

Deputy Sheriff Drew Long investigated the occurrence, and he said that the boy and his mother told him that they had just returned home from church when an argument developed with the father. They told Deputy Long that Clemmons had been drinking, and that he grabbed a butcher knife and threw it at his wife, narrowly missing her.

As Mrs. Clemmons fled, her husband reportedly picked up the knife and threw it at her once more, this time sticking it in the wall above her head. He caught and grappled with Mrs. Clemmons, and the boy reported that his father had another knife in his hand and was in the act of stabbing his mother when he fired both barrels of a 12-gauge shotgun into his back at close range.

Coroner L. B. Bennett was called, and young Clemmons was taken into custody by Deputy Sheriff Long. He was brought to Southport where a charge of murder was made against him. However, a call to District Solicitor John J. Burney led to a decision to let the youth go free under bond of $2,000.

A preliminary hearing has been set for Brunswick County Recorder's Court on July 9.

Final rites for James Palmer Clemmons, 40, of Supply were held Monday at 2 p. m. from the graveside at Sellers Cemetery near Supply by the Rev. Robert Rollins.

Funeral Today For D. M. Davis

Veteran Employee Of State Fisheries Commission Died Sunday Following Extended Illness

David Monroe Davis, 73, died at his home in Southport, Sunday, after a long illness. Rites were held Wednesday at 2 p. m. from St. Phillips Episcopal Church by the Rev. Edward B. Jordan, with burial in Northwood Cemetery.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Anna Miller Davis; a son, Leonard Miller Davis; Gloucester; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Davis Watkins, Smithfield, Va.; two sisters, Mrs. Mamie Smith and Mrs. Henry Nesbitt of Gloucester; four grandchildren.

Active pallbearers included members of the Pythogonas Lodge No. 249 of AF & AM, of which Mr. Davis was a member.

The deceased was retired from service with the North Carolina Fisheries Commission, with which he served for many years. Since his retirement he has been one of the most loyal sports fans in the community, and students of Southport high school have honored him on numerous occasions. The latest was to name one of their coveted athletic awards in his honor.

TIME and TIDE

Twenty-five years ago the ferry boat John Knox was caught on a piling and sank on the Brunswick county side of the Cape Fear River near Wilmington. Plans were to raise the sunken hull during the coming week. This boat was an important link in the transportation to and from Wilmington but had recently been replaced by bridges.

Miss Annie May Woodside was reported to be the only woman superintendent of county schools in North Carolina; Representatives of the Carolina Yacht Club were mapping plans for a yacht regatta to be held in the Southport harbor in August; and an article about Southport appeared in the Esso Road News Publication.

Twenty years ago this week a gala Fourth of July celebration was to take place in Southport. Included in the program were dances, picnics and musical presentations.

The F. B. I. recently solved a sabotage mystery and found that two of the saboteurs had spent several weeks on the elaborate yawl Lakala in Southport harbor three years ago. They were charged with intending to destroy industrial plants involved in the manufacture of ammunition. There were eight men in the group.

There was talk of organizing car pools because of the rationing of gas to citizens; an oil painting of Dr. J. Arthur Doshier was presented to the hospital in Southport which bears his name; Charles M. Trotter was elected commander of the Southport Post, American Legion, and a story was written by W. B. Keziah concerning the outstanding future of salt water sports fishing in this area in the years following the war.

Fifteen years ago this week Leslie S. Thompson, editor of The News Reporter in Whitville was named chairman of the execu- (Continued On Page 4)
