

Annual Purchase Of Pulpwood In County Rising

Latest Figures Report Payments Totaling $1,361,220 For This Product During Past Year

Purchases of pulpwood grown in North Carolina and delivered to pulp and paper mills during 1961 totaled $45,838,000, it was reported by H. J. Malsberger of Atlanta, general manager of the Southern Pulpwood Conservation Association.

Among the 97 counties in North Carolina where pulpwood was produced, the three leading counties, and the value of deliveries shipped from each, were Bladen, $1,419,560; Brunswick, $1,361,220, and Onslow, $1,313,380.

Last year's total for the state, he added, was one per cent higher than the value of $45,472,000 recorded for 1960 deliveries.

These figures were based on the results of a 12-state pulpwood production survey made by the U. S. Forest Service Experiment Stations at Asheville, and New Orleans, La., in cooperation with SPCA.

North Carolina's share in the production of wood raw material for the pulp and paper industry, Malsberger explained, was part of an all-time high pulpwood harvest for the South as a whole.

The 12-state total for 1961 was $484,614,000, a gain of three per cent over the previous record of $371,020,000 for 1960.

The South's pulpwood harvest last year was not only sixty per cent of the total for the nation, Malsberger stressed, but was also greater than that of any single foreign country and more than in any area of comparable size in the world.

He emphasized, too, that figures projected from Federal Government surveys show that for the South as a whole there is a continuing favorable ratio of forest growth over all removal. This includes removal of trees harvested for man's use, as well as losses resulting from fire, insects and disease.

"The demand for paper and other products from wood expands every year," he added, "and forest owners thus have a continuing incentive to manage their woodlands properly to produce more and better trees."

City To Provide Fallout Shelter

City Crew Busy Putting Old Battery At Fort Caswell In Shape For Any Emergency

With the Cuban situation like it is, the city officials of Southport are preparing for the worst in case of a disaster.

The Board of Aldermen decided Thursday to prepare batteries at Fort Caswell for maximum shelters with the means at hand. The city has held the right of entry to the Fort Caswell shelters for several months but no action has been taken pending further studies until now.

Other partial fallout shelters are available in the basement of the Baptist church, the corridors of the Southport high school, the Brunswick County Training School and the Court House. Basements of private homes will also provide partial fallout protection.

A three to five minute steady tone on the city fire siren means to keep alert and listen to specific directions. Three minutes of short blasts on the siren means to take cover immediately.

The officials made the following suggestions which should be observed:

Have food and water for you and your family in a convenient size box ready to take with you. This food should include: canned meat, fruit, vegetables, soups, juices, and other stable items as peanut butter, jelly, crackers, dried milk, etc.

Have warm clothing and blankets convenient to take with you. Keep the gas tank on your car as near full as is possible.

King Mackerel Catches Still Show Increase

Southport Boats Making Off-Shore Trips Have Been Bringing In Big Catches Of These Fish

The cold weather of last week failed to put a damper on the ever increasing catches of king mackerel, but there have been a couple of days during the past week when it was too rough for the boats to stay out.

Boats going off-shore have been bringing in from forty to sixty of these fish daily, and they have ranged from 6 to 12-lbs. in weight. This is expected to continue for another two or three weeks, or as long as weather permits trips to be made.

Mrs. Hulian Watts, who books more boats than any other Southport person, says that weekend dates are pretty well filled up, but she says some of the boats are open for mid-week trips.

Superior Court In Session Here For Civil Cases

Numerous Matters Disposed Of Here Last Week, Including Cemetery Case

The civil term of Brunswick County Superior Court, with Judge Leo Carr presiding, came to an end in Southport Thursday with cases involving an access road to a cemetery, a cow hitting a car and a property dispute.

In the case of Robert C. Phelps versus Velma Robinson, Harold Robinson and his wife Selma Robinson, both parties agreed to compromise their differences and use another road to the W. R. Sellers cemetery.

Phelps appeared in court on behalf of himself and the other persons who owned burial lots in or have an easement or right of burial in the cemetery. They owned the road leading from the west side or entrance to the cemetery to the Turnpike road and have the perpetual and exclusive right to use the road for going to and coming from the cemetery. They subpoenaed 13 witnesses while the Robinsons had 73.

The two parties agreed that instead of using the road that leads in a western direction to the cemetery, they would use another road that leads in a northern direction from the cemetery to the Turnpike road.

The road is located on the property belonging to Velma Robinson. It can be used for going and coming from the cemetery. But the court reserved to her the right to travel to and from her property adjoining the cemetery.

The court said that the State Highway Commission would probably maintain the northward road. If not, the interested parties should keep it up.

The court said that the road leading in a western direction to the cemetery should not be used. Court cost was split half and half between the two parties. The witness fees and the sheriff's expenses are to be paid by the parties which wanted them.

In a case of a cow that hit a car entitled Clyde A. Simmons versus Elmore Willetts and Joseph Willetts, the owners of the cow were found in the wrong.

The court found that the Simmons car was damaged by the negligence of the Willetts men. It also found that Simmons did not contribute by his own negligence to the damage to his car. Thus the court ordered that Simmons be paid $500 for car damages. The Willetts men were also taxed court costs.

In a property dispute case, the court ordered Smith Harrison, Annie Harrison, Frankie Mae Harrison, Clifton Harrison, La Eunice Harrison, Robert Stanley, Jr., James E. Stanley and Lee Ethel Stanley to pay Gladys F. McKay $180.92. This is 5/7 of the amount she paid at the purported tax sale with interest on the amount from December 29, 1949 at 6 per cent. They were also ordered to pay her 5/7 of all tax penalties and interest she had paid on the property.

The Harrisons and Stanley's were heirs of the late W. M. Harrison. In deciding the case, it was established that William Andrew Harrison, Frankie Mae Harrison, Clifton Harrison, Jeremiah Harrison and La Eunice Harrison were owners of 1/7 of the property. Their interest in the land came from their de- (Continued On Page 2)

TIME and TIDE

By ED HARPER

Twenty-five years ago this week deep hunting was appraised as being the most popular sport of the Brunswick county residents. The abundance of these animals in rural Brunswick county has attracted many sportsmen from the upper portion of the state.

Southport escaped the early frosts of the winter season during a cold spell recently. Bald Head Island showed evidence of its mild climate by the watermelons that are still flourishing there.

There were conflicting theories on how a 100-pound bag of grits was brought up in a shrimp trawler net one day during the week. Crawford Rourk hauled in the unusual catch. This and the other strange catches, such as various denominations of money, have shed an unusual light on the fishing in this area lately.

Twenty years ago this week a liberty ship constructed in Wilmington was given the name of a Brunswick county native, deceased Governor Benjamin Smith. Smith was born in Brunswick county in 1750. He was Governor of North Carolina during the years of 1810 and 1812 and died here in Southport in 1826.

Plans were being made for the county-wide recognition of Armistice Day. A guest speaker was to be present in each of the schools of Brunswick county to present a speech concerning the patriotic event.

A scrap drive by both of the city's schools was apparently having great success; the production of surgical bandages was proceeding satisfactorily; and Mrs. Thomas St. George had assumed her duties as superintendent of Doshier Memorial Hospital.

Fifteen years ago this week A. P. Henry, Jr., a young Winna-bow citizen, reported that he had killed an eight point buck in self-defense. Young Henry reported that when he had decided to walk down the road toward the sound of baying hounds obviously (Continued On Page 2)
