Sewage Disposal Plan For City Is Rejected Again

State Stream Sanitation Commission Turns Down Application To Reclassify Waters

For the fourth time in two rears, the State Stream Sanitation Committee turned down Southport's request to have swamp waters reclassified in order that the city might construct a waste stabilization pond for sewage treatment.

City Manager C. D. Pickerell said the city had expected the decision which the committee made at its October meeting in

"We have felt all along that the proposal would be turned down," he said, "and have already started working on another answer to the problem."

The rejected site for the sewage disposal system would have affected the Elizabeth river, Dutchman creek, Molasses creek and Dennis creek.

The committee voted to turn down Southport's request 4 because of four major points, Chairman J. V. Whitfield

Willard said, which include: Elizabeth river and Dutchman creek are valuable sources of seed oysters and thus add income to the county.

Elizabeth river and Dutchman creek are nursery areas for shrimp and provide a suitable habitat for wildlife.

The site is largely flooded during normal high tides and is questionable as a proper site for such a facility. In addition, it is doubtful that a treatment plant can be protected from hurricanes and other severe storms.

The prevailing southwestern summer winds would tend to carry odors from the plant to the city of Southport.

With this action by the committee, City Manager Pickerell said the city is looking for a new location for its sewage disposal needs. He said the city was now considering one of three types of plants. They include a conventional sewage disposal plant, a new type rapid oxidation plant and a lagoon type sys-

Consulting Engineer Henry Von Oessen of Wilmington said the city is considering building a lagoon type plant at a site which is now being studied but the site must meet the specifications of the State Stream Sanitation Committee and then be purchased by Southport. Von Oessen said he did not think it would affect the shellfish interest in the county.

Von Oessen also thinks that the lagoon disposal sewage system is the city's best answer to the problem. It would cost bethe city about $250,000.
