Five years ago this week the first blue marlin ever caught by a party fishing out of Southport was brought in. The 237pound billfish was caught by Earl Howard of Albemarle fishing aboard the John Ellan with Capt. Walter Lewis. Despite the large catch, it was still the story of the big one that got away. Earlier in the day, another member of the party hooked one that the others said looked fully twice as large. After a few jumps, however, the "big one" took off.

The Southport Volunteer Fire Department was attending nightly sessions of a course known as General Firemanship. Each of the seven three-hour sessions concerned a different fire fighting and prevention practice.

Ten years ago this week it was estimated that after the dock area dredging was complete at Sunny Point about the first of 1954, there would be two million highway truck loads full of rock and marl stockpiled in the storage area. The deposits would then be made available for use on road building projects. A mixture of rock, marl, sand, and water was being pumped beyond the dikes. A strean then flowed from the area back to the river, leaving the heavy deposits behind.

The Southport-Myrtle Beach marathon motorboat race was scheduled for the following day with more than 100 outboard boats expected to compete for the thirty prizes, three each in the ten divisions.

Fifteen years ago this week the U.S. Army Engineers turned in a favorable report concerning the development of flood control and drainage projects on the Waccamaw river. The development of such a feature would present the farms in the Waccamaw river area with great agricultural possibilities.
