the Bankers Short Course in Modern Farming from Brunswick county are Bennie King who farms in the Exum area and Lyle Ray King who farms on N. C. 130 highway near New Brittian bridge, reports A. S. Knowles, Acting County Extension Chairman. They will study modern farming practices at N. C. State College January 27 through February 7.

Units of the Waccamaw Bank and Trust Company of Shallotte and Southport are jointly sponsoring these scholarships that covers an all-expense paid two weeks intensive training in modern farming practices. The Waccamaw township young farmers went to Raleigh Sunday and started class. work Monday morning at N. C. State College, Knowles said.

While at State College the King boys will receive instructions on several enterprises, but will be able to spend most of their time on the one of their choosing. They will get to meet other young farmers from throughout the state and exchange ideas and experiences.

The Waccamaw Bank and Trust Company units of Southport and Shallotte are to be commended for their sponsorship of this activity, County Agent Knowles stated. Aubrey C. Johnston is cashier of the Shallotte Bank and "key" banker for the project and W. C. Love is cashier of the bank in
