Jack R. Lamphere, 32, a Jersey City, N. J., man who had been living in Supply for the past several weeks, was killed when his car crashed head-on into another automobile on U. ## Missionary Is Speaker For WMU Meeting

Southern Rhodesia as a mission field of Southern Baptists, the progress being made in the work and the needs yet to be met were the points brought out by the Rev. Gene Phillips, missionary to Southern Rhodesia, home on furlough, as he spoke to members of Woman's Missionary Union of the Brunswick Baptist Association in its annual meeting held at the Boone's Neck Baptist Church last Monday. Following the message of the Rev. Mr. Phillips, there was a question and answer period during which members of the Union were encouraged to ask questions about his work in Southern Rhodesia.

At the business meeting, held immediately following dinner on the grounds, committee reports were heard and a resolution was passed regarding the concern of members of Woman's Missionary Union over the problems engendered by unsavory movies and salacious reading matter. Members pledged their individual and united efforts to take appropriate steps in this area to bring public opinion to bear upon the problem.

Williamson To Call Fishermen In Conference

By REP. ODELL WILLIAMSON

During the time I was running to be nominated and elected to the House of Representatives, I promised the commercial fishermen and oystermen of Brunswick County that I would meet with them some time while the General Assembly is in session to try to work out with them any legislation that could be introduced to further the cause of this industry.

I am calling this meeting to be held at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, April 17, at the National Guard Armory in Shallotte. Any person that would like to hear the proposals before the Legislature concerning this industry and those who would like to make some suggestions that would help are invited to attend.

During our stay in Raleigh the lawmakers are not only kept busy attending to the matters of legislation, but we are also invited to attend many meetings held by various organizations in the city and state. For instance, Tuesday night of this past week I had the pleasure of attending a dinner meeting of the Raleigh Advertising Club. The mayor of Raleigh, Jim Reid, was the principal speaker. He pointed out how advertising helps preserve our democratic form of government by supporting newspapers, magazines, radio and television. When a person pays 10¢ for a paper, he might think he is paying the cost of the paper. But this is not the case. Without advertising, the paper could not be published and sold at the small

West Street To Keep Its Trees

Mayor Eugene Tomlinson and City Manager C. D. Pickerrill met last week with State Highway Officials concerning improvements planned for West St.

This meeting was arranged by Mayor Tomlinson in response to many statements of interest and alarm about the possibility of some of the large oak trees having to be removed.

The Highway Department's plan called for widening and resurfacing the street to a 22-foot width, which would have required the removal of three or four of the largest trees along the street.

Mayor Tomlinson stated the city's official position in the matter as being the desire to see no trees lost until actual use of the street plainly indicate that there is no other alternative.

Highway officials then agreed upon request of the mayor and city manager that the street will be resurfaced at its present width of 18-feet with no trees being lost in this improvement. The resurfacing work should begin in June or July. The highway officials also agreed that the repaving will be done with plant mix hot asphalt, making this one of the best surfaced streets in town.

Mayor Tomlinson stated that this paper that the present board of aldermen is unanimous in the decision that if traffic should prove too heavy for the 18-foot street, consideration will be given to establishing one-way traffic into the terminal by way of West St. and exit by another street, perhaps Brown or St. George Street, rather than widen West St. and lose any of the trees.
