Raise Deposit For Maternity Hospital Care

The board of trustees of Doshier Hospital approved an increase from $50 to $100 for the admission of all maternity patients at their regular monthly meeting Wednesday night.

The board also approved plans for the laboratory to purchase some new equipment to include a binocular microscope, sterilizer, centrifuge, incubator and smaller items. The new equipment will increase the accuracy of all lab work done and decrease the amount of lab work that has to be sent to other laboratories for testing that it has been unable to do. Request for routine lab work by the physician for the patient will increase. The installation of the sterilizer and incubator will establish a department of bacteriology within the laboratory.

Donations for improvement of Doshier Hospital continue to come in. Pictures for the hall ways and rooms have been contributed by Mrs. Holly A. Dutton, Southport, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Clark, Long Beach, and the Ocean View Methodist Church, Long Beach. Mrs. Dutton also has contributed curtains for the hospital rooms. Fawnee FormyDural has donated two chairs for room number 30. Mrs. Dan Harrelson donated enough paint to repaint room number 11. More curtains for the second floor patient rooms have been contributed by the Oak Island Home Demonstration Club. Baby blankets, sheets, shirts, baby basket and baby crib have been donated by the Live Oak Garden club of Southport.

Twenty units have already been entered and others are expected to come according to Thomas Batson, chairman of the float committee. Commercial floats with pretty girls, Smokey The Bear, Holsum and other attractive units are included in the parade which promises to be 'the biggest and best yet.'

Included in the bands already secured for the parade are the Columbus County High School Band, the Brunswick County High School Band and the ROTC Drill Team and Color Guard which will carry colors.

Santa will arrive in traditional style, probably aboard the big red fire truck which will parade the full length of town along U. S. 17, beginning at the Northern city limits.

Meeting Should Help Map Plans For Agriculture

Brunswick County farmers and others interested in agriculture will meet with officials from North Carolina State University tomorrow (Thursday) to discuss current developments in agriculture and the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at N.C. State.

The meeting in Supply will be held for people from New Hanover, Pender and Columbus counties. Starting time is 7:30 p. m. in the County Extension Service Building. County Extension Chairman Archie F. Martin, said the meeting will be part of a series of similar meetings scheduled across North Carolina this winter. The series is sponsored by the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences and the Agricultural Foundation.

Objectives of the meetings are to let the local people share their ideas with the university officials and to report on the university's agricultural activities.

Those appearing on the program from the university include Dr. Brooks James, Dean of the School of Agriculture, Dr. George Hyatt, Director of Extension, and Dr. E. W. Glazener, Dean of Instruction.

Similar meetings were held throughout the state in 1964 and were termed a "huge success" by both local people who attended and by those representing N.C. State. "It offers us a wonderful opportunity to exchange ideas and to become better informed about problems and concerns at the grass roots level," university officials said in announcing the meetings.

Invited to attend the meeting are farm, business and legislative leaders; members of extension advisory boards; representatives of agricultural agencies; vocational agriculture teachers and their students; and other people interested in agriculture or N. C. State.

Contributes To New Handbook

The School of Education at East Carolina College, in cooperation with various school officials, mainly from Eastern North Carolina, has prepared a new handbook of maintenance and operational procedures for school administrators.

The school officials who wrote the articles in the handbook have all completed or are enrolled in the sixth-year graduate program in ECC's School of Education. The articles cover various phases in the maintenance of public school property.

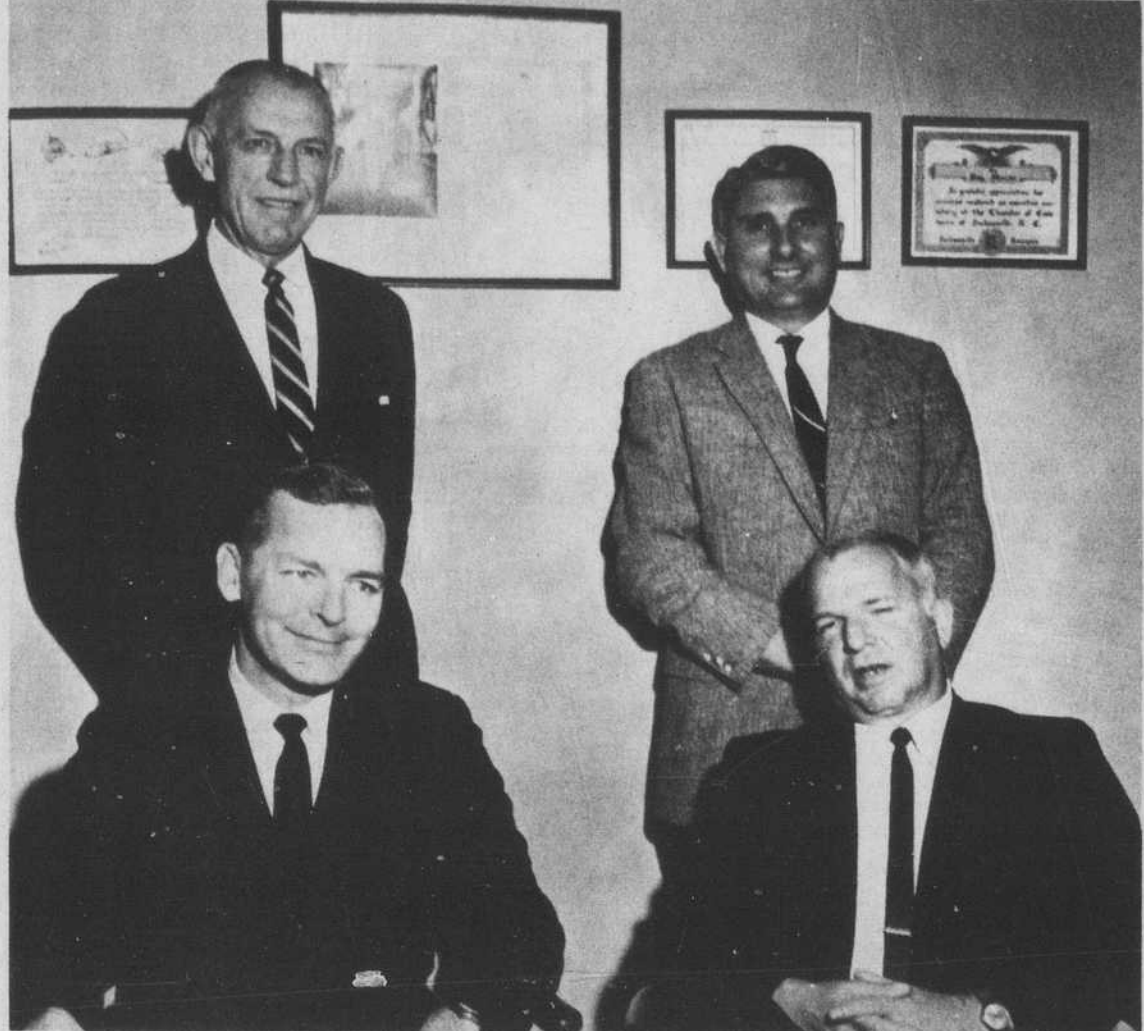

Ralph King, assistant superintendent of Brunswick County Schools, contributed an article on "The School Heating Plant--The Boiler."

Dr. Ralph Brimley, professor in the School of Education, directed the preparation of the handbook. Ronald T. Chuchola of Goldey Beacom Junior College in Wilmington, Del., served as editor and John W. Moore of New Bern High School as assistant editor.

Dr. Brimley says the publication starts a series to be continued during the coming years. It is hoped, he adds, that the series will be "useful and practical to school administrators because of the lack of printed material on school operation and maintenance."

Congressman To Visit County For Two Days

Congressman Alton A. Lennon has been making the rounds of the Seventh Congressional District during the past few weeks during the adjournment period of the second session of the 89th Congress, and next week he will be in Brunswick county.

On Monday and Tuesday he will be in the District office to fill appointments and to attend to his mail.

Next Wednesday he will be visiting throughout Brunswick County and on next Thursday he will be at the courthouse from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. He will be back in his Wilmington office on Friday.

"While I was able to fulfill numerous speaking engagements in the District during the first six months of the Session," said Congressman Lennon, "the extremely heavy legislative calendar, as well as the late Congressional adjournment, limited my visits in recent months."

"In traveling throughout each county, I shall continue my efforts to learn, by personal discussion with our people, some of their problems in connection with our National Government," he said.

New Industry Will Start At Shalotte

Brunswick county's newest industry, Highlander, Ltd., will be in operation shortly before the end of the year, it was announced by company officials yesterday.

Highlander, a leading manufacturer of ladies' knit sportswear, will initially employ about 50 workers in Shalotte, where stretch slacks will be cut and sewn. By late spring it is expected to have over 300 employees in a new, modern building in the center of the county.

President of Highlander, Ltd. is Herbert Rounick, who at age 35 was President of Spartans Industries and one of the youngest company presidents of a New York Stock Exchange listed corporation. Rounick's entire business experience was with Maro Industries, a manufacturer and distributor of men's and women's apparel, which had a volume of approximately $50,000,000 a year. In 1965, after merging his company with Spartans, he assumed the presidency of a company which has an annual volume of $250,000,000 and employs 10,000 people in 19 plants. He resigned from Spartans to form Highlander.

Visitors Study County Program

The operation of the Resources Development Commission for Brunswick county was outlined to a representative group from Hoke county Tuesday, according to W. A. Powell, chairman of the commission.

Powell stated that Dr. R. G. Townsend, chairman, and Jim Fout, director, of the newly organized Hoke County Planning and Development Commission met with Roy A. Stevens, director of the Resources Development Commission for Brunswick county, to discuss the local operation to guide them in setting up the Hoke county organization.

The Resources Development Commission is considered a model operation in Eastern North Carolina. Other county representatives have visited the area to see first hand what Brunswick is doing in the promotion of economic development.

George Gold, regional representative of the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development, joined the group in the discussion.

Powell stated that it is a pleasure to have other counties use Brunswick county as a model. "We meet with these delegations to advertise Brunswick county," he said. "Each delegation has its own questions, and we attempt to give them the best information that is available."

Time And Tide

Announcement was made in The Pilot for December 2, 1936, that the submarine Perch would visit Southport on her shakedown cruise. There was news, too, of another vessel. The shakedown boat "Captain" had run aground during a storm and had sunk with all hands aboard being saved.

A "hot Sulphur spring" promised to speed development for Fort Caswell as a resort; a Shell oil tanker was stranded in the Southport harbor due to shortages in her crew; and Southport had just had its first taste of real winter weather for the season as the temperature dropped to 25-degrees on November 28.

Five years later there was a front page weather report which classified the November just past as being "warm and dry". The lowest reading for the month was 31-degrees. This and other news was recorded in our publication for December 3, 1941.

There was a front page piece which declared "Bolivia Automobile Man Has Interesting Hobby." That was J. A. Elmore, and the "hobby" referred to was a nursery for growing azaleas and camellias--something that later developed into a very profitable venture for him. There also was a front page story telling that tobacco graders--those with a true talent for the business of separating the good weed from the bad--were much in demand.

The time was December 4, 1946, and officials at Shalotte had placed a ban on the use of fireworks in that town. Bill Wells had begun construction of a marine railway at his seafood packing house in Southport.

Book covers were being distributed to school children, and the (Continued On Page Four)
