YARD OF MONTH Yard of the Month honors for May have been awarded by members of the Southport Garden Club to Southport High School, where Mr. and Mrs. Kenwood Varnum are responsible for an outstanding job of landscaping.

This century plant at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Herring at Long Beach started a sudden and phenomenal growth last week and has now reached the roof, traveling at the rate of about one foot per day. This strange behavior leads to the suspicion that the unusual plant is about to burst into its once in a lifetime bloom. Needless to say, the Herrings and scores of other interested persons are watching with breathless interest.

Superior Court Tries Docret

The cases charging four defendants with breaking, entering and larceny were continued during last week's term of Brunswick county Superior court while defense attorneys pondered the possible effect conviction might have upon their clients, all of whom were on probation.

Funds To Study Beach Erosion

Congressman Alton Lennon appeared last week before the subcommittee of the Public Works Committee to request federal aid for financing erosion projects along the coast of Brunswick county. Following his statement before that group:

"Hurricane Hazel in October 1954 and the three hurricanes that followed in 1955 caused extensive damages and suffering along the North Carolina coast. Ten lives were lost, over 1200 homes were totally destroyed, and over 600 others heavily damaged in the Project area. The Corps of Engineers estimated area damages of $21.5 million from these hurricanes.

"I can personally attest to the tragedy caused by these four hu ricanes. From the experience, I can well understand the feeling of our citizenry that their government should do everything possible to protect them from severe storms. I understand this is the only beach protection project where local interests have given their written assurances (Continued On Page Seven)

There has been another delay in resuming operation of the Southport-Fort Fisher Ferry, with service now scheduled to start up again Friday morning.

Ferry Operations Manager E. H. Baggs noted that the very high winds made it virtually impossible for the dredging contractor to operate. The winds caused a number of mechanical breakdowns, including severing of floating lines which draw sand and silt from the bottom of the channel. Baggs said that if the current good weather continues, it is expected work can be completed by Thursday and that the ferry can resume runs Friday morning. Resumption of ferry service at Southport-Fort Fisher will also mark the beginning of the summer schedule and new, lower fares. Trips will start from the Southport side at 7 a.m. with departure on odd hours until 5 p.m. Trips from Fort Fisher depart on even hours until 6 p.m. The ferry will make additional runs throughout the summer until September 15 to accommodate greater traffic volumes generated by tourists.

Fares at Southport-Fort Fisher range from 25 cents for pedestrians to $1.50 for passenger cars to $10 for vehicles between 40 and 55 feet in length.

Scenic Route For County

Brunswick county would be included in a 178-mile Lower Cape Fear River Scenic Drive if plans suggested by the President's Council on Recreation and Natural Beauty are followed.

The proposed lower Cape Fear scenic drive would wander along the south shore of that river through the middle of Bladen County (present NC highways 87 and 41) to Moore's Creek National Military Park, then to Wilmington along present US 421.

It would then follow NC highways 133 and 87 to Southport and up US 211 through Bruns-(Continued on Page 4,

Bill To Lower Voting Age Is Lost In House

By ODELL WILLIAMSON Representative 13th House District

Since the Senate killed a bill that would have given independent university status to East Carolina College, several bills have been introduced to revamp the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina insofar as the number of trustees and the manner of their selection are concerned . It has been the thought of many --including a commission appointed for the sole purpose of stydying the situation--that the 100-member board of trustees and the manner of their selection are concerned.

It has been the thought of many--including a commission appointed for the sole purpose of studying the situation -- that the 100-member board of trustees of the consolidated university is too large. And because the board is so large, so the thinking goes. the whole university system is run by a small executive committee made up of some members who serve year after year.

Because of these feelings, a lot of people would like to see the board of trustees revamped.

Due to the fact that this is a controversial issue in the first place, and due further to the fact that it has been linked with the issue of separate university status for East Carolina College, I predict that nothing will be done about it during this session of the General Assembly.
The legislators who are interested in the East Carolina College issue will probably keep it tied to the question of revamp-ing the UNC board of trustees.

proposed constitutional amendment that would have allowed people 18 years of age and older to vote was killed in the House this past week. Of course, had the House and Senate approved it, it still would have had to be voted on by the people. The bill was debated at length in the House, and the arguments on both sides of the question were rather convincing. The sponsors of the measure argued that if a person is old enough to fight for his country, he is old enough to vote. The opponents pointed out, however, that a person this young can take orders and carry them out, but this does not necessarily mean he has the maturity and proper judgment to vote.

Of course, there were other convincing arguments put up by (Continued on Page 4)
