Media Mobile Visits County For Education

The North Carolina Department of Public Instruction sponsors the Educational Media Mobile, an extension of the services of the Center for Learning Resources, and it is in Brunswick County this week.

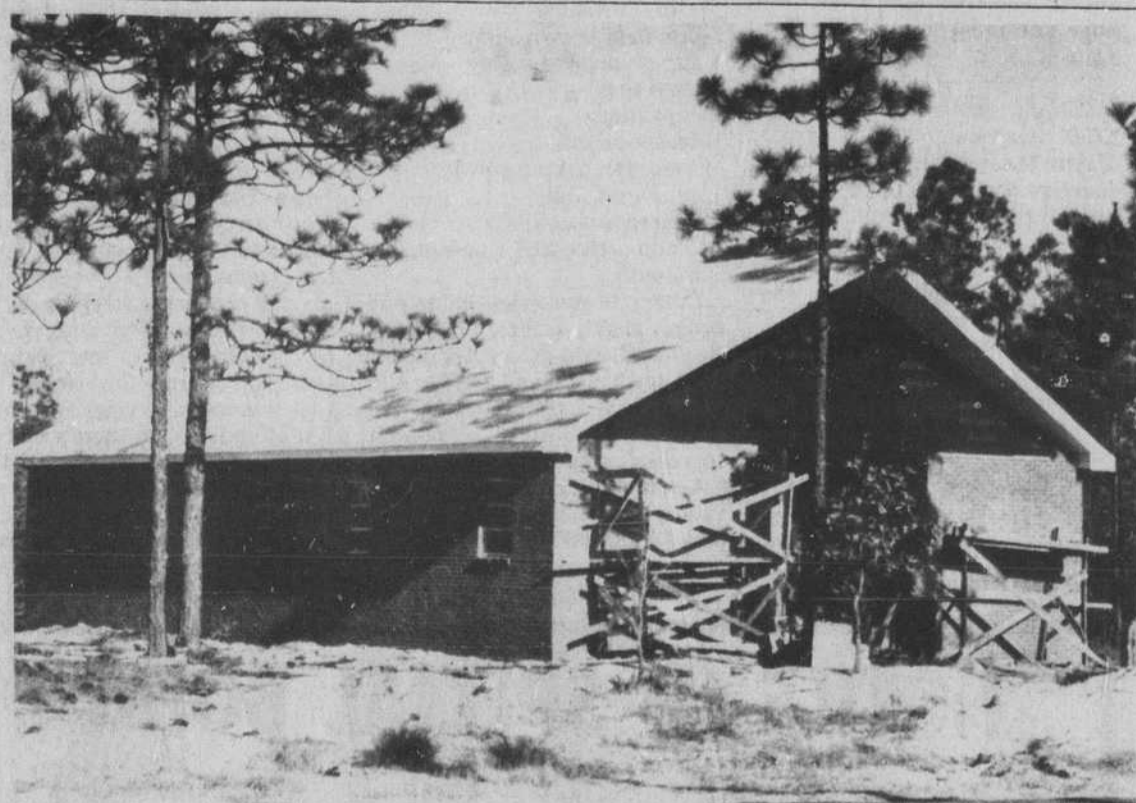

The Educational Media Mobile came to this county with its services and resources in an effort to familiarize educators with various media suitable for use in elementary and secondary schools; to help them identify the sources from which these materials may be obtained; to upgrade competencies of school personnel in the selection of educational media; and to simulate effective use of these resources in teaching-learning situations.

The Educational Media Mobile is available to provide support for workshops and in-service training programs and to aid in demonstrating good library and teaching practices.

An exhibit of North Carolina materials has been selected as the first collection to be housed in the Media Mobile. For the first time North Carolina materials of all types appropriate for elementary and secondary school use have been brought together in one collection for examination. An attempt was made for teachers and other personnel to make full use of this opportunity to preview these materials.

A tour was taken through the Educational Media Mobile to acquaint them with its resources. A card catalog indexing audiovisual materials was provided for their use. A collection of aids for evaluating and selecting both printed and audiovisual materials is a permanent part of the Media Mobile's holdings. There are three or four hundred books which are books of poetry written by North Carolinians. Magazines concerned with various aspects of North Carolina industry, government, social services, art, recreation and sports are brought together for examination. An information file containing pamphlets, clippings, and illustrative materials is displayed.

Pace Program Aids Students During Summer

Last summer, 18 college students from Brunswick county worked in local public or private non-profit agencies or organizations under the PACE-I.N.C. program. PACE-I.N.C. is acronym for Plan Assuring College Education-In North Carolina. This program is administered by the Division of Special Services, North Carolina State Department of Public Welfare.

PACE is a coordinating effort between the local high school guidance counselor, the local student's individual college, the local agency working the student, and the local volunteer PACE coordinating committee which places the student. Through PACE, these young men and women were able to work and perform a service to this county in local agencies and earn a large portion of their expenses to begin or continue their higher education.

During the summer of 1968, through PACE, students of Brunswick county earned approximately $9,756 towards their education. Jim Coats, Community Services Consultant, Elizabethtown, is serving as the local county coordinator. Inquiries from interested agencies who would want to place students, or students interested in summer work under PACE, should contact the local coordinator for further information. Application blanks for PACE may be obtained through the local coordinator's office, the local County Department of Public Welfare.

This past summer 1,999 North Carolina students from 60 colleges and universities, working in 758 different agencies, earned over 1.2 million dollars towards their higher education under PACE.

Plans Complete For New Plant

"All farmers and commercial fishermen of the area are urged to attend a special meeting at the Cedar Grove Satellite Center Friday night, January 24, beginning at 7:30" announced Harry L. Varnam of Supply, board chairman, this week.

"We are now organized with a board, committee and members and we need your help. We need to know how and what the community as a whole needs and wants for the Seafood and Farm Supply Plant," stated Varnam.

"We feel like we have the supply and the labor to operate the plant, but we need to know more facts and figures. The plans for incentive grant have been sent to SENCLand and now it is up to them," said Varnam.

"So far interest has been wonderful. The folks see the need and have expressed their interest. We have had great cooperation from Roy Stevens of the Brunswick Resources Development Commission and the Seafood Commission of Raleigh. They will help us all they can," Varnam added.

Lennon Slated For Big Role In Program

Congressman Alton Lennon is expected to exercise considerable control over significant legislation upgrading the government's efforts in oceanography.

The 7th District Congressman heads the oceanography sub-committee of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

For years, the unit was a backwater of congressional power. It held yearly hearings on the scattered ocean-related programs of the government, but had no fulltime staff and handled little legislation.

Sunday, however, an influential study commission, of which Lennon was a member, proposed establishing a single government agency, reporting directly to the White House, to run an expanded civilian oceanography program, oversee academic research in the field, and supervise state efforts aimed at preserving unspoiled coastal waters.

President Johnson is expected to endorse the proposal in his swan song State of the Union message.

Republican Congressman Charlie Mosher, the ranking GOP member on Lennon's subcommittee, believes Richard Nixon will eventually adopt it. Lennon expects that his unit will continue to have the major role in developing congressional attention to the question.

He expects to hold briefings and hearings of his unit. He has an oceanography-trained expert on his personal staff. Doug Jones is both a former naval oceanographer and a native of Southport.

Lennon is taking a noncommittal attitude about the long list of commission proposals. He feels as chairman of the subcommittee that he should not become a partisan of proposals until they have been thoroughly debated in hearings.

Mosher, however, is not reticent. He wholeheartedly backs the recommendations, and feels that if the new agency is formed the oceanography subcommittee will become the Capitol Hill focus of attention to a field which is expected to rival outer space in importance.

Woman Winner In Rifle Showdown

A Southport woman took a rifle away from a man who had the barrel poked in her side early Sunday morning and held him at gunpoint with her own weapon while members of the Southport Police Department answered her earlier call for assistance.

When Chief of Police Walton Willis reached the Cratie Arnold home at the end of Brunswick Street he found Earl Smith, Lumberton man, being held at bay by Mrs. Peggy Giles whose authority was the .22 calibre rifle she held in her hands. Smith was taken to jail and Mrs. Giles told this story of events that had led to this bloodless ending for what might easily have turned into a bloody shootout.

"It was about 2 o'clock when I heard this yelling out in front of my mother's house. I went out and saw a man yelling about a barricade being across the street. I told him my mother was sick and that the barricade was there to keep cars from coming by all hours of the night and disturbing her. He didn't seem to pay any attention to what I was saying and kept on talking in a loud and threatening voice, so I told him I'd go in and call the police.

"He told me 'that's the very thing for you to do, but if you go in I want you to be sure to come back out.' I told him I would be sure to do just that, and I went in and phoned Policeman Jones at his home. I had had some trouble before about that barricade and he had told me to phone him any time, day or night, if I needed him.

"Then I picked up my rifle and went back out. This man was standing beside his car underneath the street light, holding a rifle in his hand. He still was fussing and when I came up to him he shoved the barrel in my side and said 'I'm going to kill you'. I took my left hand (Continued On Page Four)

Time And Tide

It was January 11, 1939, and L. T. Yaskell had officially opened the freshwater fishing season. On the preceding Monday he had caught five large bass and several nice perch. The atmosphere of the Southport "Whittler's Park" had been captured on canvas and was soon to be exhibited at the World Fair in New York. The fishing boat Maude and Mable had caught some 10 thousand pounds of fish off Frying Pan shoals; Senator Bunn Frink was busy in Raleigh, and was mentioned in two news stories that week; and Superior Court had run only two days during the recent session.

Otto Hickman and Herbert Rogers had executed a rescue of a bird from the coils of a cold weather rattlesnake while coon hunting that week. The new community bowling standings had been posted; our editorial writer had spoken out against under-emphasis of high school athletics; and there was some manner of a want ad concerning a lost fox hound on the front page of The Pilot.

First Traffic Death Occurs At Longwood

William Edward Hill, 27, Shallotte, was killed early Saturday when he was thrown from his wrecked convertible about two miles east of Longwood on N.C. 904 in western Brunswick county.

The 1963 model car, driven by Hill, failed to make a turn, ran off the road and traveled 390 feet before turning over, according to State Highway Patrolman G. K. Jones. Jones said the car traveled another 94 feet after hitting some trees. He said Hill was thrown from the tumbling vehicle.

The car appeared to be traveling toward Grissettown where N.C. 904 intersects with U.S. 17.

Coroner Lowell Bennett reports that this is the first traffic fatality of the new year on the highways of Brunswick county.
