

Why I'm Against Progress

By LEWIS HARDEE, JR.

Progress has become an ugly word to me because it has come to mean the surrender of our unique personality to the commonplace. Because of it we are poorer spiritually and economically.

I have expressed regret at the gradual loss of our oaks, because in many ways they, above all else, symbolize our town. Without symbols a town is like a man without a face. Southport without oaks would be like Washington without monuments, like Cypress Gardens with no cypress trees. Who could remember the name of Carlesbad without its caverns? (What reason would there be for remembering it?)

So, beyond the esthetic value, it makes good business sense. All who come to Southport identify us with our oaks, and that, to my way of thinking is as economically advantageous as any patented trademark.

While perhaps our chief symbol, the oak is not our only one. We are famous for our wide streets and paths that lead to the river bluff, and for our whittler's bench and our grove pump. How lucky we are that these have been preserved. However, I am less optimistic about other features.

Take our marshes. We know that without them the sea will have no fishes, and for that reason alone they must be safeguarded. But beyond this they possess a beauty I have not discovered elsewhere—a beauty equal to that of the mountains or the sea itself. I have walked out on the docks of the Yacht Basin and looked across the marshland toward Oak Island: Go for yourself and see it when it shines yellow-green in new spring color, waving in the sunlight, and you will understand what I mean. Go there in winter, when it is brown and desolate and the wind comes singing over it, melancholy and sad. You will surely wish that never a stalk of it be removed. Yet, everywhere I look it is being polluted, cut up and filled in.

Southport is a town noted for its handsome, imposing coastal architecture. (I immediately think of the Watson house on Howe Street; the Carolina Apartments; the Masonic Lodge; the Episcopal and Methodist Churches; the James Harper home, the Quarantine Station House; and yes, the delightful, inimitable Amuzu Theatre. I have before me a list of dozens more.) Yet, today the town entrance is becoming a kind of electric city, grown up with neon signs and slap-dash nondescript buildings. This kind of growth has nothing to do with the good character of Southport, but with the poorest of other places.

For the wide avenues of Southport that lead so gracefully to open views of the river, and for our parks and recreational area, we have the considerate Governor Smith to thank. Today I note the growth of random housing developments on the town skirts, with little such planning or consideration for the future, which makes one ask, "Where are the Benjamin Smiths of today?"

The solution, it seems to me, lies not in the staying of a single axe, nor in the denial of any one building permit. What we need is what we have had in the past: growth with planning, and growth according to the principles of our own heritage and character. What we need, rather than more of some other place, is more of what we already are.
