Shared police service is among island topics

By Jim Harper Staff Writer

A single police department for Oak Island, a shared community planner and cooperation in trash recycling were topics that broadened community talks last week on what contributions should be made to the operation of the Long Beach Rescue Squad, the exchanges had been healthy and helpful and thought more discussion of broader community cooperation was likely.

Mayor Joan Altman, who represented Long Beach with councilman Danny Leonard, tended to downplay the work in the sessions most. "In essence, it was nothing but talk," she said.

"Chief (Danny) Laughren had drawn up some preliminary suggestions as to how a combined department could work," said Altman. "It was a combination of existing departments, of all personnel and equipment, with no suggestion for governing of the department."

Commissioner Bill Boyd, who represented Caswell Beach, said he'd discussed the Laughren plan with mayor Jack Cook "and suggested that the council members take a look at it as an idea; that's where it lies; it's gone no further than that." Yaupon Beach commissioner Joe Broyles, who met with his fellow commissioner Dot Kelly, said, "It's just a proposal; certainly you'd expect commissioners to look at a proposal." The separate sessions were to discuss how Yaupon Beach and Caswell Beach might be expected to help support the Long Beach rescue squad, which serves all three towns.

'Extremely volatile' process

County property valuation task goes to 'best', highest bid

By Holly Edwards County Editor

Revaluing Brunswick County's 90,000 parcels of property could be an "extremely volatile" process that will require highly professional and highly trained people to carry it out, county manager/attorney David Clegg told the board of commissioners Monday night.

And to acquire those most qualified personnel, commissioners voted 3-0 to enter into contract with the company that submitted the most costly proposal -- Tax Management Associates of Charlotte. Commissioners Donald Shaw and Gene Pinkerton were not at the meeting.

State law requires all counties to conduct a general revaluation of all real property every eight years. Brunswick County's revaluation must be completed in 1994.

Tax Management Associates submitted a proposal to conduct the county's revaluation for $834,900, which is $122,400 more than the cheapest proposal. However, county tax supervisor Boyd Williamson See Valuation task, page 6

However, Altman and Leonard introduced a Long Beach plan for a single police department serving the island.

'It was a flow of ideas, an exchange of information. People are thinking and not being stagnant. I think that's significant. It's a positive thing."
