Harrelson's family creates scholarship

In observance of his retirement after 30 years of teaching at the Vanderbilt University Divinity School, Brunswick County native Walter Harrelson and his family have established an endowed scholarship.

Income from the endowment, made possible through a life insurance policy, will benefit students in the divinity school and the graduate department of religion who show financial need, with special consideration given, but not limited to, students interested in the Hebrew Bible.

Harrelson, distinguished professor emeritus of Hebrew Bible, was one of 30 Protestant, Catholic, Orthodox and Jewish scholars who labored nearly 20 years to produce a new translation of the Revised Standard Version of the Bible. Harrelson was involved in the translation of the books of I and II Samuel, Leviticus, I and II Chronicles and Ezekiel.

His work was also the focus of a book entitled Justice and the Holy: Essays in Honor of Walter Harrelson.

In addition, Harrelson has been a leader in professional societies, humanities organizations, theological education, ecumenical research and interfaith dialogue.

He is the brother of Dan Harrelson of Southport.

Careful partying adds holiday cheer

With the holiday party season approaching, insurers warn hosts of parties that a new interpretation of North Carolina's law may leave them holding the bag for damages caused by a drunk driver.

In September, the N. C. Supreme Court decided that a social host could be liable for damages caused by a drunk driver. If a host serves a guest alcohol knowing that person is intoxicated and may be driving, then the host may be sued for damages.

"Unfortunately, holidays turn to tragedy for many people as a result of drunk drivers," said Thomas Huels, regional claims manager for State Farm in Raleigh. "Now that a host can be held liable for damages caused by someone who attended his party, we hope that more responsible hosts will help curb drinking and driving."

Experts say it is best to serve no alcoholic beverages but recommend that hosts do the following if they serve alcohol at their holiday parties:

- Have non-alcoholic or low-alcohol content beverages as alternatives.

- Serve plenty of food.

- Don't serve alcoholic beverages to someone who is obviously intoxicated.

- Collect guests' car keys and keep them all in a central location. Return the keys as guests leave and only if the person driving is not intoxicated.

- Call a cab or designate a non-drinking driver from the party to take intoxicated drivers home.

"The best way to prevent an accident is to follow some common sense guidelines," said Huels.

Elks barbecue

The Ladies Auxiliary to Elks Lodge #2769 will hold its final barbecue of the year on Saturday, November 21, at Middleton Park in Long Beach from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The menu will be pork barbecue, barbecued chicken or fried fish with cole slaw, baked beans and rolls or hushpuppies. Homebaked goods will be available, with a variety of cakes, pies and cookies.

A rummage sale also will be held at the site, with all proceeds from the rummage sale going to Hope Harbor Home.

Handgun training

The Brunswick County Sheriff's Department and state Law Enforcement Association will sponsor a women's handgun training course on November 21 at 10 a.m. at a local firing range.

The course is free and open to all women handgun owners. To register, persons can call toll-free 1-800-672-6379 and leave their name, address and phone number. Participants will receive a letter describing the course and a map showing directions to the firing range.

Basket, Tree of Hope projects assist the needy at Christmas

One of the more widely known services provided by the Brunswick County Volunteer and Information Center is the annual Christmas Basket/Tree-of-Hope Program.

Every year applications are accepted from mid-October through mid-November from families and individuals across Brunswick County. For those who qualify, special decorator tags are made for children under age 18 and senior citizens over 62. The tags are then distributed to the many banks, churches, clubs and other businesses which have erected Christmas trees and are participating in the Tree-of-Hope program.

Information provided on the tags includes first name, age and sex of the individual and a special "wish" for a gift from Santa. Customers, clients, church, club and/or group members are then encouraged to select tags from the tree.

VIC director Pete Barnette said, "I expect this year to be an occasion even bigger than last year. We've had inquiries beginning as early as mid-September. Mary Russ and several other great ladies have already begun the dress-making for dozens of dolls. The VIC board is discussing the site for this year, and quite a few volunteers have gone on record as saying they wouldn't miss it for the world."

If an organization, church or business would like to sponsor a Tree-of-Hope, "adopt" a family for Christmas or become involved as a volunteer in the program, a member of the VIC board of directors or staff will provide details.

Current directors are chairman Bill Turner, vice-chairman Michael Rhodes, treasurer Susan Gibble, secretary Anne-Marie Bellamy, Percy Woodard, Sylvia Ludlum, the Rev. P. D. Midgett, Vernon Parker, Bill Willetts, Brenda Register, Mark Lewis, Libby Madison, Brenda Grissett and Elaine Wright.

'Scouting for Food' program underway

Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts from the Southport-Oak Island area will be collecting food for the national "Scouting for Food" program.

Food collection began last Saturday in Southport and will continue on Saturday, November 21, on Oak Island. In addition, the scouts will be setting up food collection points at Trinity United Methodist Church, Wilson's and Food Lion grocery stores, the General Store in Long Beach and Boiling Spring Lakes City Hall.

All food collected will be distributed to the local needy by Trinity United Methodist Church in association with other area churches.

Holiday pressures

If the pressure of the holidays is sometimes too much to bear, New Hanover Regional Medical Society is offering some help in a program entitled "Coping with Holiday Stress".

The free program is scheduled for 3 p.m. Monday, November 23, in the James Walker conference room located in the medical center cafeteria.
