The Grape Vine

by Jim Hinkson

This is the time of year when the negociants send us their Beaujolais nouveau, the fresh-from-the-fermenting-tanks wine, light and short-lived, that offers a taste of the regular vintage to come.

But the best bet for wine lovers may be the regular vintage past: the 1991 Beaujolais and Beaujolais Villages, not to mention the Beaujolais crus Brouilly, Chenas Cotes de Brouilly, Fleurie, Regnie, Chiroubles, Julienas, Morgon, Moulin-a-Vent and St. Amour.

The weather was perfect for grape growing that summer in the Beaujolais region. The grapes were sweet and ripe enough to be harvested well before the rains that diluted other grapes.

Indeed, the wines of '88, '89 and '90 were also exceptionally good and are worth buying even now. Though Beaujolais is usually drunk young, the wine of a good year lasts longer. The 1991 will be long-lived, too.

A limited supply of 1992 Nouveau Beaujolais is due at the Beverage Barn this weekend.
