Shanking: cause and cure #2

Making contact with the hosel of the club instead of the club face is called shanking. A detriment to proper hitting, it has four possible causes. Here's the second of four:

- Cause
 ■ You may be rolling the club face open on the backswing, throwing the club out of balance. On the forward swing the club loops outside the target line, causing a shank.
- Cure
 ■ Don't roll the club on the backswing. Keep your hands in the same position as at address.
 ■ When you reach about waist-high on the backswing, cock the club straight upward throughout the rest of the backswing.
 ■ This will make the club lighter, more balanced and improve the downswing. It will prevent you from shoving the hosel into the ball.
