Bladen resident

Phillips named to judge bench in 13th District

Nancy Phillips of Bladen County has been appointed a District Court judge in District 13 that includes Brunswick, Columbus and Bladen counties.

The position is one of six new District Court judgeships created by the General Assembly during the 1997 legislative session. The position is subject to the November, 2000, elections.

"Nancy shares my commitment to protecting North Carolina's families and keeping dangerous criminals off our streets," said Gov. Jim Hunt, who announced the appointment this week. "Her diverse background, experience as an attorney and commitment to public service will make her an outstanding judge."

Phillips received her bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and her law degree from Campbell University School of Law. She currently practices law at Hill, Womble and Phillips, P.A., in Elizabethtown. Prior to becoming an attorney, she owned and operated her own business, was a teacher at a junior high school and worked as a vocational rehabilitation instructor.

Phillips is a member of the Boys and Girls Homes of North Carolina Inc. board of trustees; chairman of First Citizens Bank and Trust Company's local advisory board and a past member of the Bladen County Board of Education. She received the Governor's Award for Volunteerism in 1996.

She is also a member of the American Bar Association, the North Carolina State Bar Association, the 13th Judicial District Bar Association and the Delta Theta Phi law fraternity.

Phillips is a member of Wesley's Chapel United Methodist Church, is married to Dr. Bruce Phillips and has three children: Michael, Mark and Matthew.

Yaupon residents will decide level of trash service

By Richard Nubel
Municipal Editor

As Brunswick County and its 18 municipalities struggle to devise a consolidated solid waste management program, Yaupon Beach commissioners will invite town residents and property owners to build their own refuse program for the year to begin July 1.

Commissioners May 11 will conduct a public hearing at Town Hall to allow residents and property owners to decide just how much they want the town to spend on solid waste removal this year and just what solid waste services they want to pay for.

Under terms of a contract between Brunswick County, towns and cities in the county, and Waste Industries Inc., a private carting service, each homeowner in Brunswick County, including its towns, will be afforded once-weekly curbside refuse collection beginning in July.

But, Yaupon Beach residents can opt to have the town pay for other services, including curbside collection of recyclables and curbside collection of bagged and bundled yard debris.

Commissioners say it will be up to residents of the town whether or not Yaupon Beach spends an additional $2.50 per household per month for recycling or another 80 cents per household monthly for yard debris collection.

"This is the first time we've done anything like this," town clerk Nancy Wilson said this week. "We're going to let the citizens tell us whether or not to include this in our budget for next year."

Any solid waste program for which citizens opt will be paid for from the town's general fund. There will be no separate billing of homes.

While commissioners will let the citizens decide on recycling and yard debris, the governing board itself still has at least one more decision to make with regard to solid waste collection. Still undecided is whether a second weekly garbage collection will be necessary in areas of town frequented by tourists.

"While everybody will get a once-weekly pickup from Brunswick County, we realize there are rentals out there," Ms. Wilson said. "We have not yet decided if we will go with a second pick-up for rentals only. If we do decide on a second pick-up for first and second rows, it will either be paid for by the accommodations tax, which is generated by tourists, or owners will be asked to contract directly with Waste Industries."
