 gram with participating police departments and place a decal on their front and rear windows. By signing an agreement and displaying the decal, volunteers give officers permission to stop their cars between the hours of 1 and 5 a.m.
 "More than 60 law enforcement departments in North Carolina have already agreed to participate in this program," said Tony Queen, director of the Crime Prevention Division of crime control and public safety. "We hope that as the program spreads, it will make a difference."

Watch Your Car North Carolina is funded by a grant from the federal Bureau of Justice Assistance. The federal model is based on state programs in Fayetteville and in Texas, Florida and Illinois.

To participate in Bald Head Island's "Watch Your Car" program, islanders may contact the village police department at 457-5252.

 Southport-Oak Island Interchurch Fellowship. Money will go to the organization's three food pantries, located at Trinity United Methodist Church, Ocean View United Methodist and Oak Island Presbyterian, and people who are temporarily short of money for things like rent, utility bills or medication may be assisted.

After the walk, the Martin Luther King Jr. picnic was held at the park and over 200 people participated.

Bartlett was pleased to see the congregations of so many different churches come together to focus on the cause of world hunger and to fellowship together. Participation and money raised was doubled due to the whole community's effort, he said.
