

UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

"What I want is a bright whorl play," said Toole to the amateur, who had brought him a six-act drama. "How do you mean—a short, bright drama?" asked the author. "Can you give me an idea?" "Oh, yes," said Toole, "there's one. It's direct and leaves much to the imagination. It is in one act. When the curtain goes up two persons are discovered on a sofa, one a pretty young woman, the other a nice looking young fellow. They embrace; neither of them says a word. Then a door opens at the back and a commercial traveler enters. He wears an overcoat and carries a heavy bag. You can tell at once by his manner that he is the husband of the young woman. At least that would be the inference of every intelligent playgoer. The husband takes off his coat, draws from his pocket a heavy Colt's revolver and in the midst of the silent embrace of hero and heroine fires. The young woman falls dead. He fires again and the young man is similarly disposed of. Then a pair of angels descend, and in the midst of a chorus of angels, and proceed to contemplate his sanguinary work. "Great heavens!" he exclaims; "I am on the wrong floor."—Reynolds News.

Nerve Pillow.
A "nerve" pillow is something which physicians said to recommend and which can easily be made at home. One needs only to gather or buy a quantity of dried sorrel, herbs, such as hops and catnip leaves, horehound and sweet fern, adding to them some grass, balsam pine and as many sweet smelling, sleepy things as one can think of.
Dry, and powder, and mix all together. Then fill some "nerve" pillow with the Summerwood sachet powder thus formed. Stuff the pillow with down or cotton batting or feathers, and either scatter the powder thick through the filling, or, what is better, make sachet bags and fasten them several to the inner corners of the pillow.—Philadelphia Ledger.

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

Two Grateful Letters from Women Who Avoided Serious Operations.—Many Women Suffering from Like Conditions Will Be Interested.

Margaret Ryan.

When a physician tells a woman, suffering from female trouble, that an operation is necessary it, of course, frightens her.
The very thought of the operating table and the knife strikes terror to her heart. As one woman expressed it, when told by her physician that she must undergo an operation, she felt that her death knell had sounded.
Our hospitals are full of women who are there for just such operations! It is quite true that these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is the only recourse, but such cases are much rarer than is generally supposed, because a great many women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after the doctors had said an operation must be performed. In fact, up to the point where the knife must be used to secure instant relief, this medicine is certain to help. The strongest and most grateful statements possible to make come from women who, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, have escaped serious operations.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:
I cannot find words to express my thanks for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me. The doctor said I could not get well unless I had an operation for the trouble from which I suffered. I knew I could not stand the trial of an operation and made up my mind I would not be a invalid for life.

TOUGHENING TENDERFEET.

Simple Life as Practiced by Some Exposed in the Southwest.
Ranged in a circle in a shady grove on the banks of Salt Fork of the Arkansas River on March 10th are a number of comfortable, three-room summer cottages where a number of young men from Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Los Angeles, and Chicago are playing cowboy and enjoying the novelty of ranch life, says the Ponca City (Okla.) Courier. They are the sons of wealthy parents, and have been sent west to get deep muscles, good lungs, and a rich deep tan on their cheeks. They pay handsomely for their entertainment and enjoy luxuries as well as the usual comforts.

The members of this tenderfoot colony call their "chuck" in common in a dining hall 25x50 feet in size, and the walter is an unusually dark complexioned Sambo. A bathroom with porcelain tubs adds to the comfort of the colony. One cottage is used as a library and clubroom. The apartments of the tenderfeet are adorned with college pennants, pictures of famous young women, and such other things as attract the fancy of college students.

The contract for entertainment provides each guest with a horse, saddle, and bridle. The other necessary paraphernalia is purchased by the tenderfeet and some of the outfits would cause Alkali and his friends to stand wide-eyed in astonishment. The tenderfeet choose their own hours of riding. When ready for their day's hunt a genuine cowboy brings a bunch of ponies from which the riders choose their mounts. Visitors from nearby towns are entertained occasionally at dancing and card parties. The tenderfeet are more at ease than in punching cattle.

The tenderfeet are a good natured lot of young men, and are not at all afraid of their western acquaintances. It is said that for general safety and to insure their return to their parents, each tenderfoot, upon his arrival, is photographed for purposes of identification. After he has cast his "store clothes" and arrayed himself in sombrero, blue flannel shirt, leather leggings, high-heeled boots, and spurs, he is photographed a second time and his name being traced, he should be sent back to his parents.

SAVED BABY LYON'S LIFE.

Awful Slight From That Dreadful Complaint, Infantile Typhoid—Mother Frantically Sought Relief.
"Our baby had that dreadful complaint, Infantile Typhoid, which afflicted him for several months, commencing at the top of his head, and at last covering his whole body. His sufferings were untold and constant misery, in fact, there was nothing we would not have done to have given him relief. We finally procured a full set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about three or four days he began to show a brighter light on his face. We were so glad that we were saving our baby's life, for he was the most precious thing we had held dear to us. We were so glad that we were saving our baby's life, for he was the most precious thing we had held dear to us. We were so glad that we were saving our baby's life, for he was the most precious thing we had held dear to us."—Appleton Ave., Toronto, Can., July 18, 1903.

Close Questioning.

In recalling incidents connected with Virginia politics some years ago a prominent Virginian recently related to a Washington man an account of an investigation of election frauds in the lower section of the State. In the course of the proceedings it developed that the ballots in an important precinct had not been sealed after the final count, thereby being exposed to fraudulent practices. The chairman of the investigating committee closely questioned the election judge as to why the ballots had been opened.
"Could you not obtain any mileage in the town?"
"No, sir."
"Could you not procure some sealing wax—some shoemaker's wax, if nothing else?"
"No, sir."
"Well, then, sir, why didn't you go out into the woods and get some resin? Don't you mean to tell me that there were no pine trees around there shedding tears at your infamously rascality?"—Washington Star.

Good Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve dyspepsia, keeps up the patient's debility, and does not help keep up the army of dyspeptics.
Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, and advised on the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.
When this state is reached, to resort to stimulants is like whipping a tired horse with a big lead. Every additional effort he makes under the lash increases his loss of power to move the load.
Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easy to digest, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.
"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:
"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From my first box I tried Grape-Nuts food, and after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.
"Am much stronger, not nervous and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every day."
"I reish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonsful at a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." COTTON CONDITIONS

Crop is Much Shorter Than Was Thought To Be

BADLY DAMAGED BY STORMS

Mr. E. D. Smith, of South Carolina, After a Tour of Cotton Growing States, Holds to Opinion That Cotton Crop of This Year will Not Exceed Equal That of Last Year—Storms, Rains, Frost and Boll Weevil Responsible.

Columbia, Special.—Mr. E. D. Smith, president of the South Carolina Cotton Association and field agent of the general cotton association, returned from a trip over the cotton belt and gave out an interesting statement of his observations. Mr. Smith says: "Since September 25th I have visited every cotton State, winding up at Orangeburg, S. C., Monday, October 8th. My trip, therefore, covered a period in which the Gulf storm that covered eastern Louisiana all of Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama occurred. The conditions, as I found them previous to the storm, did not warrant an expectation of a yield very greatly in excess of last year. The effect of the storm can never be fully estimated until the final yield of the crop is known. There certainly has never been a more disastrous storm in its effect upon cotton in the history of cotton growing. In the States where it raged worst at least 60 per cent of the entire matured crop was open; the fields were white from Alabama to Texas in the low lands the cotton was beaten, and over large territory water coming from the Mexico army, or from the Gulf of Mexico, had deluged the field ground and a great amount of cotton not yet open was submerged and all the open cotton that was beaten out was ruined. The continued wet weather, subsequent to the storm, caused a great deal to sprout in the boll and rotting of the plant was greatly impaired by the force of the wind and the effects of the rain. Since then the unprecedented cold wave, accompanied with killing frost, has practically covered the entire cotton half of the cotton belt.

In Texas and the Territories, where neither storm nor frost has yet been, we found that the yield promised to be in excess of last year but even in this section the final outlook is problematical, for the reason that boll worms, caterpillars and boll weevil have caused a greater territory than ever in the history of cotton. The entire Brass Valley of central and eastern Texas; in fact the entire cotton producing part of Texas has not made any cotton since the first of September, nor will it make any more, on account of the boll weevil. Therefore a frost in Texas would have practically no effect on the ultimate yield of her crop. The boll weevil has extended its range over the entire Red River Valley in Texas and into Oklahoma and southern Arkansas and into Oklahoma and Indian Territory, and now within twenty miles of the Mississippi, probably having crossed this river this month. Therefore, in my opinion, the yield of this crop will not be very greatly in excess of last year. To sum the whole matter up, the conditions are these: The weevil has made a top crop in Texas; impossible; any citizen of that State will tell you that no more cotton will be made in the cotton growing section of Texas this season. Part of the Mississippi the storm damage, and then in addition to that, the frost, has cut off any possibility of further maturing and the destruction of that that was partially matured. The crop will not be all to be from two to three to four weeks early. Therefore, taking these conditions all together, the outlook of this crop must be exceedingly expected in a short time.

The headlines in one of the South Carolina newspapers a few days ago were a little misleading, in that they made it appear that I advised the farmers to sell their cotton at ten cents a pound. What I said then I repeat now, and to the association fixed the line in their judgment, below which no one should sell a pound of cotton, at ten cents. I advised the farmers that from this figure up, according to the market, if they were under obligations and had debts to meet, to sell sufficient cotton to meet their obligations and to use their judgment, based upon the information that we could give them as to the conditions as to what they would do with the balance.

"I also said that cotton was cheap at twelve and one-half cents per pound at the present outlook. I think every conservative cotton man, both buyer, grower and spinner, will concede this to be true. It will certainly have to bring that price if the obligations of the South, incurred in making this crop, are met. If ever there was a time when the kind of favored higher prices, this is the time. And if the farmers will but market their crops conservatively; not rush it to market, in my judgment, they will be richly rewarded for so doing."

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies; those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

Genuine—Syrup of Figs

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy. To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the
