Mr. Andrews' letter follows:

"In view of the announcement that desire respectfully to invite your attention to the following matters.

This committee represents the holders of North Carolina bonds and has a matter of grave fear.

Moore was acting as deputy policemade arrangements to donate bonds man, according to reports, and when and coupous of your State to the the Rhyne boy exploded the fireamount of three millions of dollars cracker, he pulled his pistol and sent to a foreign government. No corresponding benefit would accrue therefrom to individual bondholders, but a burdenency for both parties in interest the passage of the proper legislative measures for submission to the people, in accordance with the provision of your constitutional amendment concerning the bonds in question. The holders of these securities fully appreciate the position which has been urged on behalf of North Carolina and only desire a similar recognition of their equities by the people of the State. In that event the bondholders now resort through you and the general assembly to the explicit proisions of the constitution. In any event they respectfully submit that the circumstances above set forth render it opportune to include this subject in your call for a special session, if such inclusion be necesto act upon the measure." The governor replied that North Carolina had paid all its just debts, and even debts which it could not have been made to pay and that the people by their voice had declared the special tax bond repudiated, and that the legislature had done the same thing twice, and that no payment or settlement would be made regarding these fraudulent bonds. pleases without getting a penny

Public Questions

Secretary of War Delivers His First Speech Since Returning From Tour of World Before Notable Gathering in Boston.

Boston, Special.-Greeted with cheers as "the next President of the United States," a topic which he carefully avoided in his own remarks, however, Secretary of War William H. Taft, delivered his first public speech since his world-circling tour, at the annual banquet of the Boston merchants' association at the Hotel Somerset.

The banquet closed a long and strenuous day for the Secretary of War, during which he delivered a brief address before 400 ministers in the morning and attended a reception and spoke before a large gathering of the Jews of the city at the Elysium Club in the afternoon. During his visit to Boston, which ended Tuesday morning. Secretary Taft is the guest of Samuel Carr, a Boston banker, and a relative of Mrs. Taft. As Mr. Taft rose all the guests dacy for the presidency. Mr. Taft's speech was broad defense of Presi velt and the administrati ing with the trusts and w cent financial crisis. The sible for the panic he said. "guilty managers of some large railroad and financia prises," and not those who course of their official duty, made known to the business the facts and commented on the denied that the administration arraigned the whole business wor as dishonest. The President had con demned the iaw breakers, and co vinced those who had u cumulated enormous power and ca tal, that they were not immune. I President, he declared, had never otherwise than that the of the country as a whole and their methods sound! . said Mr. Taft, "it is chiefly in interest of the great body of imest business men that he has made his great fight for lawful business

That the railroad rate law was re sponsible for the financial panic, Mr. Taft characterized as absurd, and as for the shrinkage in the value of railroad stocks, he said that neither Mr. Roosevelt nor his administration were responsible for State legislation against railroads. "Instead of making a panic," he said, "the national policy of ending the lawlessness of corporations in inter-State commerce and of taking away their power of issuing, without supervision, stock and bonds, will produce a change in their management and remove one fruitful cause for loss of public confidence."

The action of the State Legislatures against railroads, he declares was occasioned by the same revelations of lawlessness and discrimin nation in railway management that made the Federal rate bill a necessity, but, he said. "if the tSate measures have been too drastic the cause of the injustice is not with the national government."
