EYE DEFECTS

The principal defects of the eye are Long Sight, Short Sight, Old Sight and Astigmatism or Confused Vision. Any of these, or a combination of several, may occur in both eyes, or in only one eye. These defects produce strain which is the inherent cause of headaches, eyenches, watery eyes, and other unpleasant symptoms, which only correctly fitted glasses will relieve. If your eyes trouble you in any way you should have them examined. Our method of tests shows whether you need glasses or not. We use the experience that we have gained by years of study and practical work in discriminating between various defects of the eye.
