FORGOT JUST ONCE

And Lapse Brought Zoo Worker Pretty Near His End.

Sallor Tells of Time He Was Forced to Stand Off Grizzly With His Bare Hands, and No Chance for Footwork

"A person can get used to most anythin'," observed a huge, grizzled man with two livid scars haif an inch apart on his face, from the right eyebrow clear across his nose to the left corner of his jaw. He was in sailor uniform, and was standing in the street with the crowd watching a double-jointed acrobat, who had just wriggled from a strait-jacket, hanging head down three flectively, "and some day you may forget. But the fire won't."

He strcked his scars with an apologetic finger as he continued: "Before I enlisted I worked in a zoo. I didu't have to train 'em. No; mine was the heavy work, feedin' 'em and cleanin' out the cages. Trainin' 'em, you can always have a whip or a revolver handy, but when you're cleanin' a cage you haven't anythin' but a shovel or a pitchfork; and, doin' that kind of work, you sort of forget they're wild beasts, anyway. They seem more like cows or horses or any other civilized animals. I was so big and husky I sometimes went in with nothin' but my bare hands; but I was always takin' a chance. I was pretty careful, though, when I went into old Zeke's cage. Zeke was a cross-grained old grizzly. When I didn't have my pitchfork, I generally aimed to have a wrench or a piece of gas pipe handy, But one day I forgot.

"Zeke somehow got the door open between him and two young grizzlies, and I had to get him back again. I shouldn't have gone in without a club; but it was about quittin' time at noon, and I was in a hurry. I jumped into the cage mad enough to scratch his eves out with my bare hands.

"Get out of here!" I yelled, wavin' my arms in his face. "He only growled at me; but the other two bears, in a panic, bolted into quicker than a flash to leave Zeke where he was and let the other bears have his den. I slammed the door shut between, and started toward the manhole through which I had entered. But old Zeke got up on his toes when he saw I had shut him out of his own quarters and away from his playmates; and, layin' his ears back and openin' his mouth matil he gaped like a crocodile, he came at me all standin'.

"I didn't have time to reach the door. Lettin' out a yell for help, I stood my ground. Old Zeke came at me with paws up, just like a clumsy old boxer. He wasn't so clumsy as he looked, though. I gave him a right and left in the ribs and dodged; but before I could get out of reach, his right paw caught me on the left shoulder and ripped my shirt off to my waist. I managed to get in another lab, but it was like hittin' a sack of sand. It hurt my fist more'n It did him. "If the cage had been larger, I might have been able to keep out of the way until help came; for you can be sure I was yellin' bloody murder, although at the time I hardly realized what I was doin'. But first thing I knew he had me cornered. I hit him on the snout then, as hard as I could hit; but he swept my hands down with one great paw, and with the other he gave me this little memento I carry on my face. The next minute he had those terrible claws in the middle of my back, and he was nuzzlin' the top of my head, trying to get his teeth into the back of my neck. That might have been the end so far as I wits concerned if a trainer and an attendant hadn't come just then to pry him off with iron bars. I was like a squeezed lemon when they finally dragged me out, and for a long time I didn't care whether school kept or not. I'm all right now, though. Think they'd let me in the navy if I wasn't? I guess not."-Youth's Companion.

Bill the Aesthete.

During the warmest hour of yesterday a traction engine drawing two "trallers" piled high with barrels of stout and beer panted painfully along Fleet street. One of the laborers engaged on mysterious excavations of the pavement pointed with his shovel to the procession and exclaimed: "Oh, my Lord, Bill, ain't that a beautifui sight?" His mate gazed admiringly at the glorious spectacle and replied. with a sympathetic sigh, "Not half!" And yet some short-sighted cynic has enid that the British workingman is "devoid of vision," and "does not, like the ancient Greeks, possess an innate aesthetic appreciation of the Beautiful."-London Daily News.

Watch Your Step.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was speaking before a Sunday school gathering. "Ambition," he said, "is the most laudable trait in the world, but no permanent success comes from flying too high.

"Success is only achieved step by step and too many of us, in our discentent and desire to go higher, overlook that fact. Too many of us are like

"John was buttonholed on the street one day by a friend who asked him: "'John, are you satisfied with your present position?

"Naw," answered John. But the boss sin't satisfied with the way I fill it, either, so I guess it's fifty-fifty."

Possibility of War Between Germany and Poland

Reports state that the Polish work men are continually rising up against the Germans in many towns in upper Silesia. The present events are the result of a deliberate German policy of oppression and provocation persued in regard to the Polish population. It is certain fact that the sternest repressive measure will be taken aganst the rebellious strikers and the insurrection suppressed with a relentless hand. It can not be expected that the Poles in Poland will remain quite when people of their own race are being shot down continually by the German machine guns a few miles over the border line. It seems that war between Germany and Poland is an immediate possibility.
