There are in the various summer schools in the state more than 4,500 teachers. This shows the progress and wisdom of the state in making arrangements to make the teachers responsible for receiving better salaries and being more efficient.

In the majority of the current magazines and newspapers of today we see articles on "Go to church Sunday." Many towns and cities have waged regular campaigns, not leaving it all for the ministers to do during the hot weather.

We rejoice with the citizens of one of our neighboring counties in the organization of a Moore county law and order league. The plan of this organization is to actively support and uphold the officers and courts of their county in upholding and executing the laws of the state and nation.

HODGE "DISCREDITED AND DISGRUNTLED," SAYS REPUBLICAN PAPER

Henry Cabot Lodge is the Republican leader of the United States senate. True, he is a leader without a following and one who is being rapidly discredited in his own party.

tions. He was able to balk and hamper and hamstring the very things he had himself in other days, and days not so very remote, urged upon the country.
The worst thing that can happen to the Republican party for the future is to keep Senator Lodge in a place of influence, or where he will seem to have influence.

With such discredited party leadership in the United States senate, is it any wonder that banner Republican states like Iowa and banner Republican newspapers like the Des Moines Register are rebuking the reactionary and malevolent element which now controls the Republican party?

OUR NEW SOLICITOR

Most everybody knows that Hon. Z. V. Long, of Statesville, has been nominated and will be elected solicitor in this district to succeed Solicitor Hayden Clement, of Salisbury, who declined to stand for re-election.

Iredell county is honored in one of her worthy sons having been given the Democratic nomination for solicitor in this district, without a contest; the position of prosecuting attorney is a vitally important one and the fact that Zebulon Vance Long, of the Statesville bar, has received without opposition this high and honorable trust at the hands of the pure democracy of the district is a matter in which the good people of his home town and native county take peculiar pride in.

For 20 years Mr. Long has practiced law in Statesville, during which time he has appeared, with great ability, in many of the most important criminal and civil cases that have come up for trial. "A man is not without honor save in his own country," said the Man of Galilee nearly 2,000 years ago; this eternal truth applies to Mr. Long only in respect to its being humanly impossible to rate a home boy at his real worth.

DESCRIPTION OF ROT DISEASES IN CORN

The diseases herein described may attack the plant at any stage of its development from the seedling stage to maturity. They produce certain fairly well marked effects (symptoms) that may be recognized in the different stages of the growth of the plant.

When kernels of corn which are affected by the rot organisms are planted, the conditions in the soil which favor the germination of the seed and the growth of the young seedling also favor the growth and development of the organisms. These organisms may spread directly from the planted kernel into the tissues of the young seedling or through the soil to the growing roots.

Various symptoms may follow as the result of this early injury. The diseased kernels, roots and lower parts of the stalk become rotted and dark colored. The seedlings which are badly infected will die soon after germination. This manifestation of the disease is known as seedling blight and is the cause of poor stands in many fields.

Other seedlings which are only slightly affected often partly recover under favorable conditions for growth by pushing out new roots above the affected parts. Such plants may show considerable yellowing and remain stunted. They are handicapped during their early growth, and will not be so productive as those which are not affected.

When the corn is about knee-high or a little higher, diseased fields usually show characteristics similar to fields on poor soils. Where low fertility and poor physical condition of the soil and the disease occur together the diseased condition is more severe.

THE BLAIR-DOVER ROW FIRES DOVER BUT SHEDS LIGHT ON INEFFICIENCY

(By David F. St. Clair.)

Washington, August 1.—The Dover-Blair row and the resignation of Dover as assistant secretary of the treasury furnish a striking illustration of the inefficiency prevailing in more than one department of the government.

A few months after the advent of the Harding administration Old Guard members of congress grew extremely impatient at the number of Democrats and Progressive Republicans still left in the treasury department and especially in the income tax division.

The late Senator Penrose, the last of the Mohicans, had the president appoint Mr. Dover right under Secretary Mellon's nose to "fire" the Democrats and to "Hardingize" the service in that department.

Mr. Dover resigned, his friends say, not so much because of the opposition of Secretary Mellon and Commissioner Blair to the policy he was appointed to carry out, but because of the trend of recent political events. They see him in his resignation as a victim of the evil days that are now befalling the Old Guard all down the line from the White House down.

His resignation is also a sore disappointment to many big corporate interests which claim they have not received a square deal in the adjustment of their income tax. That complaint has fixed attention on the delay, tardiness and time wasted by the employes in transacting business in the income tax division.

It is certain when Mr. Blair became commissioner internal revenue about a year ago, he found a jam of unfinished business in the income tax division, but he decided that the trained force employed to finish up this business was preferable to the appointment of new men whom it would take months to break in.

At this writing no safe prediction can be made as to just what the panicky Republicans will do with the tariff bill, because the only leadership on the Republican side is that displayed by Lenroot, Republican, of Wisconsin, who is now fighting some of the high rates, and generally giving an imitation of the late Senator Dooliver in the Payne-Aldrich tariff fight.

Senator Simmons said the dye industry was now entrusted to the Republican tariff makers; that he would not vote for a further embargo nor would he support the high duties on dyes in the pending bill.

Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, a member of the dye industry, attempted to call to his assistance Senator Simmons and his record on the dye embargo. The New Jersey senator soon found himself accused of the lie on which he had based his attack on Senator Simmons.

BORAH AND LA FOLLETTE FORESHADOW REPUBLICAN DEFEAT

Of course, it was to be expected that progressive Republican senators like Borah and LaFollette would speak their minds freely on this bill, as Senator Norris, of Nebraska, already has done.

"The Republican party is now in power. Others may vote with the party to lay on these increased taxes and burdens, but the responsibility is fixed and inescapable; it is with the party to whom has been entrusted the reins of authority.

Senator LaFollette minced no words—he never does. He said: "It would seem, sir, that the men responsible for this Republican administration, in the light of this history, would, with the return of the Republican party to power, frame a tariff bill with at least some show of decent regard for meeting the undoubted will and desire of the vast majority of the people.

Washington, July 24.—Republican senators and leaders are seriously considering the postponement of the tariff bill until the short session of congress in December. The barrage laid down against this profiteering measure by the leading Republican papers of the country, the growing defection in their own ranks, and the results of Republican primaries everywhere have caused a genuine panic among the profiteering protectionists.

PANICKY REPUBLICANS WOULD POSTPONE BILL

A REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC SENATOR DISCUSS THE TARIFF

Sometimes when there is a "full" in the proceedings of the house I drop over in the senate to see and hear what is going on there.

Sometime ago I "happened" in the senate chamber while Senator Simmons was making one of his strong tariff arguments. When Simmons exclaimed I cannot understand why the Republicans should impose such a high tariff on firearms, Senator Norris, a Republican, of Nebraska, who, like LaFollette and some other Republicans, is opposed to the prohibitive tariff interposed and said in an ironical manner:

(Before quoting from Mr. Norris I will explain what the tariff on guns, etc., is.)

The house bill imposed the following high taxes: On shotguns valued at more than $5, $1.50 each; valued at more than $5 and not more than $15, $4 each; valued at $10 and not more than $25, $6 each; valued at more than $25, $10 each; with an additional ad valorem rate of 35 per cent, which the senate committee made 45 per cent.

"I am surprised that the Senator (Mr. Simmons) does not understand it. Of course, it is not for protection, because we send guns all over the world. We command the world's markets in guns. There is no protection in it. It is not for revenue, of course, because none are imported; but the Senator forgets—and this applies to a good many other things in this bill—that there is another reason that might have a practical effect, and I am surprised that the Senator does not understand it.

"We have this market. We are reaching out to get the balance of the world. We want a tariff away up high so that we can raise the price here and still keep out the foreigner, while we go out into the foreigner's country and sell guns at less than cost and put him out of business.

"The Senator from North Carolina has not grasped the idea yet. He ought, it seems to me, to be able to understand, and he will when he gets as old as I am and lives as long as I have, that one of the blessings that comes to us through such legislation as this is that for every drop of sweat and every bit of toll that our people go through and all the suffering they have to endure they are going to be able to see somebody living high and flying with the geese."

Senator Simmons on Norris' speech. Senator Norris' brief speech against the Profiteers' Tariff bill won the following eulogy from Senator Simmons, ranking minority member of the finance committee:

"I want to say that I have heard quite a number of good tariff speeches, but I think the one just delivered by the Senator from Nebraska is the best tariff speech that I have ever heard. It is the best indictment of this bill that has been made. It is the best indictment of the application of the principle of protection so as to help those who do not need help, and oppress those who are already overburdened that has been made.

"I want to express my gratitude and my admiration for the Senator. He has done the public a service in making this thing so clear, and I hope complete control of both Houses of Congress and had its own President will be taken by the press of the country to the people of the country, ought to be more careful of his facts. He said it is a veil of irony, it is before making a statement of that kind, but an irony which will be understood.

There is no question about the Senator's position. He is a man of iron, it is before making a statement of that kind, but an irony which will be understood.

CANNING FRUITS AND BERRIES IN GLASS AND TIN

Canned Apples.—Late fall and winter apples, which are slightly acid, are best for canning. Apples shrink more in canning than most fruits, therefore they should be blanched for one minute before processing. Pack tightly in No. 3 cans, cover with syrup (14 ounces of sugar to one gallon of water) or syrup No. 3.

Canned Peas.—The Bartlett pear is best for canning. Select ripe, sound, medium size fruit (cut in halves, or if large, in quarters). Remove all the hard portions around the seed and submerge in cold water to prevent discoloration.

Plunge the halves or quarters into boiling syrup and allow them to be cooked until they can be pierced with a straw, remove and pack closely into No. 3 can or quart jar. Cover with a boiling syrup made of three pounds and nine ounces of sugar and one gallon of water (Syrup No. 3).

Many complaints have come in regarding the hardness and lack of flavor in some pears. In every instance it was found that Keiffer pears not thoroughly ripe had been used no pre-cooking was done. Keiffer pears are not recommended for canning, but a palatable product may be had if the fruit is allowed to ripen thoroughly and care is taken to pre-cook until it is tender.

Canned Figs.—Peel six quarts of figs. Bring two quarts of No. 3 syrup to boiling point and add figs. Cook until saturated with sugar but not until fiber breaks down. Place figs carefully in jars and fill with syrup.

Ford Manufactures His Own Windshield Glass. Departs From Customary Methods and Applies Ford Principles. The Ford Motor Company, Detroit has begun to manufacture its own plate glass, and already has in operation the first modern glass house ever equipped especially to make glass for automobiles.

As is customary when taking over the manufacture of a new product, Ford has applied his own principles of production, and, as a consequence, the methods and machinery used in making Ford glass are a radical departure from established practice.

Glass making, when viewed in the Ford plant, looks to be very simple. Raw materials are introduced into a furnace where they become a molten mass. Drawn from the furnace in a semi-liquid state, the glass passes under a roller, which gives it width and thickness, and on to a moving conveyor. This carries it for 464 feet through a gradually cooling furnace.

At the end, it is cut and placed on another conveyor which carries it through the grinding and polishing, after which it is ready for use.

This adds a new link to the fact that we are the instrumentalities by which these men will not only profit, but continue to profiteer. They pander from time to time in line with the Ford policy to achieve complete independence of outside material let everybody pay tribute to their sources in manufacturing Ford products, and at the same time are the means by which Ford is enabled to use in the production of motor cars, trucks and tractor material of unusually high quality and sell them at the famous Ford price.
