Washington has been called "the City of Magnificent Distances" Pennsylvania Avenue is so broad iffat the street cars in the middle seem to take up no room. There are trees and parks everywhere Each avenue is planted with one variety of tree only It has been said that no such trees, adorn a city anywhere else in America

Since 1872 the city has been systematically planting and controlling the trees under governmental authority and it has spent thousands of dollars on this good work

To a majority of people the White House, the residence of our President. is the most interesting building in Washington George Washington selected the place for the White House laid the corner stone in 1792, and lived to see the building completed huf never occupied it. John Adams was the first President to live in it. It was burned by the British during the way of 1812, but was at once re hin our own lives built. The walls of the building were blackened but not destroyed.

Other stately and interesting build ings in Washington include the Capi talewhere our nation does its business with the Senate wing to the right, and the Honse wing to the left, the Li brary of. Congress, an impressive marble building, called the most beautiful library in the world; the Treas ury Building; the War and Navy Building, and the Smithsonian Institute. One of the most striking even tions in the city is the Washington Mounment, a towering white marbies obelisk five hundred and fifty five feet high. This monument was completed in $885 in memory of George Wash ingion, the father of our country. It is lighted by electricity and has an elevator carrying sight seeing parties to the platform near the top. Here there are eight windows, two on each from which one can get a won-I view of the city. There is also iral stairway on the landing of are a series of stones 170 in
